525 Britons To Study U.S. Methods of Production

Factory Managers, Supervisors and Workers to Make Up Visiting 'Teams'

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

About 525 British factory managers, plant supervisors and workers will come to the United States during 1949 to study American production methods, the Economic Cooperation Administration announced yesterday.

The first of 35 "teams" of about 15 men each is expected in New York around February 15 in an unprecedented effort to boost productivity in British industries.

The visitors will not only inspect American factories, but will actually work from six to eight weeks with their opposite numbers in the United States. They will also live wherever possible with their American counterparts: The British foreman, for example in the home of an American foreman.

Enthusiasm Reported

The entire enterprise, bigger and more intensive than anything of its kind in international labor relations, is an outgrowth of the Anglo-American Council on Productivity, proposed last summer by Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Paul G. Hoffman, ECA Administrator.

Philip D. Reed of the General Electric Co., chairman of the American group which met in London last November, reported glowingly to Hoffman yesterday about "the degree of cordial feeling and mutual understanding which developed."

One of the council's five committees worked out the plan to send teams to visit American factories, with the possibility that American groups might also go to Britain later to study specialized production techniques there.

The British teams, Reed wrote yesterday, will represent all levels of production.

Makeup of Teams

"Each team will be drawn from a specific industry," he reported to Hoffman. "A typical team will consist of about 15 persons equally divided between supervisory grades, technical grades and production workers. The latter will include members nominated by the Trades Unions."

Before each team leaves the United Kingdom, he said, it will get a "thorough briefing" in the problems of its particular industry. At the end of its six-to-eight weeks' American assignment, it will spend a week in New York briefing an incoming team from Great Britain.

Then, when the members return home, they will spend another month, said Reed, "explaining in their own industry what they have found and how they believe it can

Plane Carrying Sick Children Crashes, 8 Killed

Schoenberg, Germany (Tuesday, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Eight persons were killed and 17 gravely injured when a Royal Air Force airlift Dakota carrying sick children from Berlin crashed Monday night near this city in the Russian occupation zone, police said.

The plane carried 25 persons, including the 17 German children who were being evacuated from blockaded Berlin to recuperate in the British zone, officials said.

Britain Seeks To Buy 150 to 180 Second-Hand B-29s

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—Britain is negotiating with the United States for the purchase of 150 to 180 second-hand B-29 Superfortress bombers, responsible British and American informants said today.

This country's lagging program of bomber output was given by informants as a main reason for talks said to be taking place between American and British air force leaders to clinch the B-29 deal.

May, Garssons Convictions Are Upheld

U. S. Court of Appeals Affirms Sentences for Conspiracy-Bribery

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the convictions of former Representative Andrew J. May and Murray W. and Henry M. Garsson on conspiracy-bribery charges.

By a 2 to 1 vote, Judges E. Barrett Prettyman and Henry W. Edgerton affirmed the District Court verdict in which the wartime chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee was convicted of taking $53,000 in bribes from the Garsson brothers for munitions contract and other "services."

The Appeals Court majority struck down defense claims that the grand jury which returned the indictment was illegally constituted; that the indictment was improper; that there were numerous trial errors and bias, and that evidence was insufficient to convict.

Judge Stephens Dissents

Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens dissented, holding that the indictment of the three was defective on several grounds, and attempted to make them punishable twice for the same acts.

In a 10-week trial, ending July 3, 1947, May, a Kentucky Democrat, and the Garssons, described as having pyramided a "letterhead" firm into a 70-odd million-dollar business in shells, fuses, etc., were found guilty on three counts.

The first count charged conspiracy to commit offenses against the United States and to defraud the United States, through May's intercession for the Garssons. Other counts charged that May received the bribes as compensation for services for the Garsson's Erie Basin Metal Products, Inc., and Batavia Metal Products, Inc.

Indicted with them was Joseph F. Freeman, Washington representative of the Garssons. Acquitted by a directed verdict, Freeman, who was ailing during the trial, died January 18, 1848, at his Los Angeles home.

At Liberty Under Bonds

May and the Garssons were each sentenced by Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut on July 25, 1947, to 8 to 24 months in prison, and are at liberty on $2000 bonds.

Warren E. Magee, Washington attorney for the 73-year-old May, said yesterday he would seek a rehearing of the Court of Appeals

92-Member Panel Combed to Obtain 6 Men, 6 Women

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Mildred Elizabeth Gillars, who was also known as "Axis Sally" during honey-voiced wartime broadcasts for the German radio, heard herself branded in District Court yesterday as "a paid collaborator" of the Nazis.

The charge was hurled by Justice Department Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., in identifying the case in the courtroom of Federal Judge Edward M. Curran before whom Miss Gillars, now 48, stands accused of treason.

As Kelley continued, declaring that "the defendant knowingly and willfully wove into her remarks official propaganda determined by the Government of Germany . . ." Defense Counsel James J. Laughlin leaped to his feet with the objection that Kelley was going beyond the scope of identification.

After a bench conference, Kelley, dropping allusions to German propaganda, told the court "the Government will undertake to establish that the programs employed by the defendant were of a nature attacking members of the Jewish race, the then President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and the British people in general."

Prospective jurors were probed deeply for religious and ideological differences before final selection of the panel. Finally selected were six men and six women, among them six Negroes, after a four-hour combing of a 92-member panel of prospective jurors.

District Women Interviewed For Kinsey Book on Sex Habits

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey said today he is planning a trip to California to complete interviews for his forthcoming book on the sex habits of women.

But he said he has "no plans" for visiting Hollywood.

Rather, Kinsey said, he expects to interview women in a community with a high proportion of churchgoers, and in one which is predominantly industrial.

The Indiana University zoology professor, who started the world talking with his book on male sex habits, said he and his research team have interviewed 15,000 women.

"Sexual Behavior of the Human Female" is scheduled for publication next year, although the study of women's sex habits will continue beyond that.

He refused to identify the communities in California where he will get the final data. One is a churchgoing community whose citizens asked him to make the study there.

Of the 15,000 interviews so far, most have been made in New York City and Washington, D. C.

Kinsey said he picked the big cities in an effort to find enough women within a population class "to guarantee valid results." He was especially interested in women with high incomes in executive-type jobs.

Kinsey revealed that in Washington his staff took many case histories of Negro women. He said cautiously, however, that he was uncertain whether the sampling was large enough to include as valid results in his book.

Kinsey won't say what he has found out about women so far. He said that as a scientist he has learned not to trust his impressions, and he hasn't looked very closely at the results yet.

Taft-Hartley Hearings Are Rushed

February 10 Finish Voted by Senate Labor Committee On 8-5 Party Split

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Democratic leadership turned on the power yesterday and moved to complete Senate committee hearings on the Taft-Hartley Act by February 10.

The high-speed timetable was voted by the Senate Labor Committee on a straight party division, 8 to 5.

It calls for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and restoration of the old Wagner Act, with some amendments.

The eight Democratic members of the committee backed up a motion by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) placing a time limit on the hearings after a secret morning meeting with Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ind.).

The committee's action came as something of a surprise, for only last week Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) declared it was the consensus of the committee to run hearings for four to six weeks.

Hopes to Start Friday

Chairman Thomas said last night he hoped to get hearings under way Friday.

The Pepper resolution not only sets a time limit on the hearings, but also on the type of amendments. The resolution states, in effect, that the Taft-Hartley Act is dead; that the Wagner Act is restored; and that the hearings will be devoted to amendments "consistent with the proposals made by the President."

Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act and senior minority member of the committee, denounced the Pepper resolution as a Democratic Party "face-saving" stratagem in the face of organized labor's demands for immediate restoration of the Wagner Act.

Taft and the other Republican members of the committee made it clear they intend to offer a series of amendments, and if blocked in committee, to turn the floor of the Senate into a legislative battleground over the issue.

The Senate Labor Committee's action came a few hours after the CIO had called upon Congress to respond to the mandate of the last election campaign by immediately repealing the Taft-Hartley Act and bringing back the Wagner Act.

After that, the CIO is prepared to join in a dispassionate study of how to improve the Nation's labor code in line with the President's requests for outlawing of jurisdictional strikes and unjustifiable secondary boycotts, and for a means of preventing national strikes of an emergency nature.

Offered as Substitute

The CIO's position was emphasized by Arthur Goldberg, union counsel, in a press conference. He said that CIO leaders felt certain that straight repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act could be quickly passed through Congress.

The Senate Labor Committee opened its closed committee session yesterday with the consideration of a resolution by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) to hold and complete hearings on the Taft-Hartley Act by March 1. Pepper offered his February 10 resolution as a substitute, and it carried.

Chairman Thomas said, in reply to a reporter's query, that, so far as he knew, there was no direct request from the White House to cut short hearings on the labor legislation. He admitted, however, that the decision to do so followed the meeting with Majority Leader Lucas, who sought to be "helpful to expedite our troubles."

The hearings will be held ostensibly on the Thomas bill, which

Peace Pleas Shower Red China Areas

Leaflets Dropped By Planes; 150,000 Troops Following Chiang Southward

Nanking, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Government planes dropped thousands of peace appeal leaflets in Communist territory today as acting president, Li Tsung-jen redoubled his efforts to win an "honorable" agreement with the Communists.

No major fighting was reported on any front. Communist spearheads, only 15 miles from Nanking, paused to permit the advancing armies to fill the vacuum left by Nationalist evacuation of key points north of the Yangtze.

An estimated 150,000 personal troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were moving south from Nanking and Shanghai toward southeast China, leading to reports the government might abandon the Nanking-Shanghai defense line.

But the Nationalists were fortifying a defense ring around Pukow, on the north bank of the Yangtze across from Nanking, to stall off shelling of the capital until Li can begin peace talks with the Communists.

A Government ammunition dump and ordnance factory outside Nanking's east gate blew up today with a series of explosions that continued for four hours.

Reports said deaths would run into the hundreds but police roped off the area and announced that "no one was wounded or killed."

Chinese newspapers insisted that the Communists had selected Peiping as the scene of peace talks and had named four chief negotiators to meet with the Nationalist five-man delegation headed by Shao Li-tze.

Participants Listed

The reports listed Chou En-lai, head of the Communist delegation to Nanking during Gen. George C. Marshall's peace efforts; Li Li-san, No. 1 political commissar for Manchuria, who was exiled to Moscow years ago and reentered China with the Russian armies; Lin Chuhan, Communist Minister of Finance, and Wu Yu-chang, regarded by the Reds as their best international link because of the many years he spent abroad.

All the emphasis seemed to be on peace, and the Communists were reported working with the Nationalists in restoring communications. Peiping-Tientsin-Nanking telegraph service was resumed.

[Li, according to the Associated Press, ordered release of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang and others held in kid-glove imprisonment by Chiang Kai-shek ever since the famous 1936 kidnaping.

[Chang Hsueh-Liang kidnaped the generalissimo at Sian in December, 1936, and freed him after forcing him to agree on an anti-Japanese front with the Communists. Chiang Kai-shek then arrested his kidnaper and has held him in house arrest ever since.]

'Face-Saving' Peiping Surrender Approved

Peiping (Tuesday), Jan. 25 (AP).—Approval of Peiping's face-saving surrender to the Communists by China's acting president, Li Tsung-jen, was disclosed today.

Liu Chuang-hua, Li's special representative to Peiping, told newsmen the acting president not only had approved the localized settlement, but thought it could well be used as a model for bringing peace to other areas.

Peiping surrendered Saturday after intermittent shelling.

Armistice Talks With Egypt Near Collapse Over Negev

Rhodes, Jan. 24 (AP).—Israeli-Egyptian armistice talks were kept alive tonight by a decision to postpone discussions until Thursday to give each delegation time to consult with its capital.

Disagreements over the touchy Negev boundary issue brought the conference during the day to the brink of failure. One source said the negotiations had broken down, but the talks later were resumed.

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator, is following a policy of keeping both sides talking. He said: "As long as I can keep them meeting there is still hope."

Bunche will continue informal meetings from now until Thursday, but no major decisions will be taken until word is received from Cairo and Tel Aviv.

Israel Votes Today On National Issues

Tel Aviv, Jan. 24 (AP).—The new Jewish state of Israel will hold its first national election Tuesday with foreign policy as a major issue.

Some 400,000 Israel citizens—a tenth of them Arabs—are expected to participate. They will choose 12 members of a constituent assembly which will draft the state's constitution. The assembly also is expected to set up a new government.

Twenty-one parties are in the field. There is a general belief that the present provisional government will win.

That government is a united front with Prime Minister David Ben Gurion's mildly leftist Labor Party (Mapai) in a position of leadership. The main challenge comes from the far right Freedom Movement which Menachem Beigin forced from his former underground army, Irgun Zvai Leumi.

Jewish State Now In Better Position On U.N. Admission

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—Israel tonight won a major victory in her battle for world recognition as a new nation.

France recognized the young Jewish state and the British cabinet decided to take similar action within the next few days. Australia and New Zealand are expected to go along with Britain.

There were indications in Rome that Italian recognition also was under discussion.

Predictions were made that Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg soon would get on the bandwagon. Those three nations coordinate their foreign policies with Britain and France.

May Find Selves Alone

Soon the Arab nations may find themselves alone in their opposition to Israel, it was said.

The sudden flood of expected recognitions would remove most obstacles from Israel's application for membership in the United Nations. Britain heretofore has advocated delay in admitting the Jewish state.

Twenty-three nations, including the United States and Russia, now have recognized Israel.

The French action was taken in the form of "de facto" recognition—the type extended by the United States just after the British surrendered their mandate and quit Palestine.

It means recognition of Israel as an operating government, but falls short of "de jure" recognition which acknowledges a government as a legal authority and calls for an exchange of diplomatic representatives.

Noted Pianist Heeds Request To Leave U. S.

The Justice Department announced last night that the German pianist, Walter Gieseking, who has been under attack for alleged wartime connections with the Nazis, has agreed to leave the United States no later than 11 a. m. today.

The department said the musician is in the custody of immigration agents in New York. It added that his sell-out concert, scheduled at Carnegie Hall last night, had been canceled.

Gieseking arrived here Saturday. He was booked for 30 to 40 concerts in the United States, Canada and Cuba by April 2.

At the time of his arrival, immigration authorities told him there was some doubt as to his right to enter the country. But, pending an investigation, they paroled him in the custody of his manager, Charles Wagner.

The Justice Department said "sufficient evidence" came into the hands of immigration authorities yesterday to warrant a full-scale investigation.

Move of Moscow And Balkan Lands Reveals Damage Done Them by ECA

London, Jan. 25 (Tuesday), (U.P.).—Soviet Russia has set up an Economic Council, comprising herself and five Balkan states, which will pool their resources and "know how" as an answer to the West's Marshall Plan, Moscow disclosed today.

Representatives of Bulgaria, Poland, Romania, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Russia met "this month" in the Soviet capital to create the council, the broadcast said.

The "Iron Curtain" countries admitted by inference that their absence from the Marshall Plan was beginning to hurt their economies but, in a face-saving explanation, pointed out they could not join because the plan violated their sovereignty.

"The conference established by the governments of the United States, Great Britain and certain other countries of western Europe has been, as a matter of fact, boycotting trade relations with the countries of the peoples' democracies and Russia since their countries did not consider it possible to submit to the dictate of the Marshall Plan," the Moscow Radio quoted the Tass Agency as saying.

Tass said the new council would be open to any other European country providing "they share the principles of the council . . . and the desire to participate in the broad economic cooperation" with the Soviet bloc.

Meetings of the council will be held periodically in the capitals of the signatory countries, Tass said.

According to Tass, the duties of the council will include:

1. To arrange for the interchange of technical assistance.
2. To "render mutual assistance" in regard to raw materials, foodstuffs, machinery, equipment, etc.
3. To supply exchange experience in the economic field.

Yugoslavia and Albania were not among the countries whose representatives met in Moscow to set up the council.

Finland, which did not participate in the Marshall Plan, could apply for membership in the new group.

New Senate District Body Is Organized

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new Senate District committee organization, apparently geared to give high priority to both home rule and sales tax legislation for Washington, was announced yesterday by Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.).

He named six subcommittees, after the pattern set in the last Congress. He also followed another precedent—Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) as District chairman in 1947 named McGrath to head a subcommittee; McGrath named a Republican to head one group, placing Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) at the head of the Subcommittee on Public Health, Education, Recreation and Welfare.

Members of the subcommittee on District Home Rule and Reorganization will be Senators Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman; Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), and Mrs. Smith. All three have indicated a strong sympathy for the home rule idea in principle.

Members of the fiscal affairs subcommittee, which will have to

U. S. Ambassador Bruce Resigns Argentine Post

Buenos Aires, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador James Bruce announced today that he had submitted his resignation to President Truman. He will leave for Washington next week.

Bruce implied he would like to resume the private interests he abandoned to take the diplomatic post here.

(No shift of United States foreign policy is involved in the Bruce resignation, diplomatic quarters in Washington said.

New Airlift, Emergency $100,000 Provided To Feed Snowbound Indians and Livestock

By The Associated Press

A new airlift and $100,000 in emergency funds were thrown Monday into the battle for relief of snowbound humans and cattle in the Nation's hard-hit ranges.

President Truman made immediately available $100,000 in emergency funds as 17 Air Force C-82 Flying Boxcars began efforts to feed more than two million snowbound sheep and cattle.

Fifty thousand dollars was allocated to the Bureau of Indian Affairs for use in relieving the hardship of thousands of Indians on Western reservations. The other $50,000 was turned over to the Land Management Bureau of the Interior Department to help supply feed for the livestock.

The big Air Force cargo planes moved into Fallon (Nev.) Air Base while snowplows still worked to clear the runways, and scores of volunteers began loading them with feed. The ships will carry the fodder to Ely, Nev., in the heart of the Nevada-Utah range for distribution by truck, sled and tractor to weakened and hungry sheep and cattle.

The Air Force has resumed a similar airlift started in the Nebraska-South Dakota region after the January 2 blizzard.

In the frigid Plains area flights were limited by adverse weather. The Army employed a dozen "weasels" — track-equipped vehicles capable of plowing their way through deep snow — in the Wyoming, South Dakota and Nebraska area for use in livestock feed distribution and for reestablishment of communication with isolated communities.

Light snow fell again on the Northern Plains and Rockies where subzero air hung over accumulated drifts.

Woman Arrested on Suspicion In Wave of Bad Checks Here

A petite, auburn-haired woman in a stylish red gabardine suit, who reportedly had left a trail of fraudulent checks in exclusive Washington dress shops in the past six weeks, was arrested in a Connecticut ave. liquor store yesterday.

She was being held for investigation, according to police, after attempting to pass a $131.95 check for goods ordered at the nearby Anna May Nichols women's wear store, 2601 Connecticut ave. She also left a $14.95 fraudulent check for a sweater purchased at the Beatrice Shop, 2626 Connecticut ave., police said.

Police also were investigating a series of five bad checks, totaling $322.25, passed in Washington stores since December 6 and signed with the same name as those uncovered yesterday.

Earlier in the day police had received a report from Peck & Peck, 1519 Connecticut ave. nw., that a check for $89.95, written January 17 on the Dupont Circle branch of Riggs National Bank, had been returned with the notation "no account."

The check was for a red gabardine suit, apparently the outfit the woman was wearing when arrested, police reported.

Police said the woman hurried out of the Anna May Nichols shop when an employe attempted to verify her account by telephone with the bank, on which the $131.95

Stalin Just a Pawn, Says Soviet Writer

'Kremlin Fears Working Class . . .'

VICTOR KRAVCHENKO
. . . Makes statement to court

Paris, Jan. 24 (U.P.)—Victor Kravchenko, author of the best seller "I Chose Freedom," charged today that Stalin is the pawn of his Politburo and that the people of Russia live in terror under a "barbaric regime."

In a bitter speech on the first day of his libel suit against a Communist publication, he declared its editors could not have afforded to defend themselves without the help of the Soviet Union. At least 11 witneses have been brought from Russia.

"I want to tell all the workers of the world the Soviet Union is the enemy of all of them," Kravchenko said. He said other Russians hoped to escape as he did.

He is suing Les Lettres Francaises, a weekly, its editor, Andre Wurmser, and its director, Claude Morgan, for a million francs ($3150) and costs for a November, 1947, article which called him "so illiterate as to be uncapable of writing" his book.

Pointing to the defense witnesses, Kravchenko said, "They come here because they have families in Russia," implying reprisals if they had refused to come.

Morgan described Kravchenko as a Russian "traitor" who is "anti-French." He said responsibility for the article in question rested with its author, Sim Thomas, whom he identified only as "an American journalist."

Wurmser said "There is every indication that Kravchenko's 'novel' is a flagrant lie. He can't even read his book in English. A man who is an enemy of Russia is an enemy of France."

Kravchenko told the court he had to hide while he was writing his book in America because he was "pursued by Russian agents."

Actedron Just 'Red Label' Benzedrine

Actedron, reportedly used by Communists as a will-destroying drug, is just plain benezedrine according to an Hungarian-born chemist at George Washington University here.

Dr. John Fargo, university lecturer in pharmaceutical chemistry, identified the product yesterday. A British Roman Catholic weekly, the Tablet, said last week that Hungarian Communists may use actedron to drug Josef Cardinal Mindszenty before his trial for high treason.

Merely Trade Name

Actedron, said Dr. Fargo, is merely the trade name for benzedrine pills made at Ujpest, Hungary, by Chinoin, a pharmaceutical firm. The same firm, he added, markets the same product in its Buenos Aires, Argentina, branch, but under the name of Aktedol.

When he left Hungary 19 months ago, actedron could be bought without prescription in drug stores there, said Dr. Farago. In the United States, a prescription is required for the pills, but the substance in crystalline form is contained in inhalators sold freely for relief from colds.

Could Produce Despair

When used under preconditioning as described by the Catholic periodical, it could well reduce a person to a state of abject despair by destroying the mental will to resist, said the university chemist.

The "treatment," it was charged, is timed so that the prisoner appears for trial in passive uncertainty and deepest despair.

Reds May Omit Slav Claims in Austrian Talks

Vienna, Jan. 24 (U.P.)—Informed government sources said today that Russia has indicated her willingness to omit the question of Yugoslav territorial claims against Austria from Austrian peace treaty talks.

Soviet insistent backing of Yugoslav territorial claims has been one of the chief factors delaying an Austrian peace treaty. New talks are scheduled for next month in London.

The government source said the Russians have hinted in recent talks that they would drop the discussion of Yugoslav claims in return for a clause providing for eventual arbitration under supervision of the United Nations.

Government quarters said if the Russians would omit Yugoslav demands from the London meeting of the Foreign Ministers' deputies—thereby speeding up the treaty—Austria would be willing to be "quite generous in regard to the lump sum payment it is to make to Russia for former German assets in eastern Austria."

Bread Still Rationed to 300 Millions

Nearly 300 million persons in the world still are dependent upon rationing systems for bread, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) reported last night.

This condition exists, the international agency said, despite a marked improvement in world bread grain supplies at the beginning of this year. World production in 1948 was said to have exceeded the prewar average.

It also exists at a time when some major wheat producing countries—including the United States—are concerned over possible new surpluses, the FAO said.

In a review of the world grain situation, the FAO said larger stocks of wheat are needed to protect the world's consumers against shortages.

Major importing countries were said to be concerned over the "present apparent balance between export supplies and world import needs."

The FAO report came just prior to Wednesday's opening of a world conference to negotiate a new international wheat agreement designed to stabilize world supplies and prices.

Garrison Post No. 104 Installs New Officers

3 Nations Fail To Agree Upon Defense Pact

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 24 (AP).—Norway, Sweden and Denmark failed today to reach a final agreement on the formation of a Scandinavian defense alliance.

Another meeting will be held in Oslo Saturday. A communique issued at the close of the three-day session here said the possibility for a common defense system still exists. The bulletin said:

"Under certain conditions it will be possible to agree on a mutually obliging but otherwise detached Scandinavian defense alliance."

Apparently this meant there was no chance of securing agreement on a pact which would link the Scandinavian countries with the proposed North Atlantic alliance now being negotiated in Washington.

Informants said Sweden wants a Scandinavian pact based on neutrality and not tied in with the western defense system. Norway was pictured as favoring a type of alliance which would enable the three countries to secure weapons and certain guarantees from the western powers.

U. N. Council Told Indonesia Can't End War

Lake Success, Jan. 24 (AP).—The U. N. Good Offices Committee told the Security Council today the war in Indonesia cannot be ended until the Republican government is re-established.

In a special report to the 11-nation Council, the committee said: "There is no authority on the Republican side to implement the Security Council's resolution directing both parties to cease hostilities."

Dutch troops overran the East Indies republic in a "police action" offensive which began December 18. Two weeks ago the Netherlands government announced hostilities had ended. Indonesian officials said, however, their scattered army was just starting to fight a guerilla war of self-defense.

This guerilla activity has increased to such an extent, the good offices committee report said, that "It is impossible for the Netherland forces to cease fire, let alone cease hostilities."

The Security Council resumes debate on Indonesia Tuesday. Delegates will continue discussion of a four-power resolution calling on the Dutch and Indonesians to stop fighting at once. It also demands immediate freedom for Indonesian political leaders imprisoned by Dutch authorities and the creation of a United States of Indonesia by July 1, 1950.

3 Sentenced In Passport Fraud Case

Philadelphia, Jan. 24 (AP).—Former United States Commissioner Norman J. Griffin and two other Federal employes were sentenced today to 18 months in prison on passport fraud charges.

Griffin was freed on a $1000 bail pending an appeal for a new trial.

The other two—Warren Belcher, former chief of the Philadelphia passport office, and Robert T. Press, former deputy clerk in the United States district clerk's office—were taken to Moyamensing Prison.

The three were tried on charges of issuing false affidavits to secure passports by Chinese.

Federal Judge Paul C. Leahy postponed sentencing John Lee, Philadelphia restaurant owner, and Oscar Yew Hoh, a New York importer, in the case.

Indonesian Guerillas Fire On U. N. Team

Batavia, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Indonesian guerillas ambushed an American-led United Nations observation team in a crossfire of rifle and machinegun bullets nine miles outside Jogjakarta, the team reported today. No one was injured.

The military observation team led by Maj. R. B. Hall of Mansfield, Ohio, and consisting of Maj. P. J. Abs of Belgium and Squadron Leader Reginald Hackshall of Australia, returned today from central Java, where the attack occurred.

They said guerillas opened fire on them January 17 while they were traveling with a Dutch convoy from Surakarta along the highway to Jogjakarta.

The Dutch high command announced meanwhile that the Republican army as an organized fighting force no longer existed. It said opposition from Indonesians consisted of continuous sniping attacks, sabotage and assaults against Dutch estates.

However the high command admitted its mopping-up operations were running "at a slower tempo than the swift advance of the first weeks" but expressed confidence in ultimately restoring law and order to Java and Sumatra.

Yoshida Ready To Carry Out Anti-Red Plan

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Conservative Premier Shigeru Yoshida, backed by Japan's first postwar parliamentary majority, despite Communist gains in yesterday's election, today promised early action to carry out Gen. Douglas MacArthur's anti-Communist economic program.

Latest unofficial election returns gave Yoshida's Democratic Liberal Party more than half of the Diet's 466 seats. With the equally conservative Democrats, the premier's party would control more than 70 per cent of the legislature.

The Communists also recorded heavy per centage gains, boosting their strength to nearly nine times the four seats they held in the last diet.

Party-by-party totals were as follows:

Democratic Liberals, 264; Democrats, 69; Social Democarts, 49; Communists, 35; People's Cooperative Party, 13; Labor Farmer's Party, 7; Social Renovation Party, 5; minor parties and independents, 24.

The heavy Conservative vote was gratifying to officials of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's occupation government, who have been urging action to curb Communist control of Japanese labor.

On the other hand, Communist spokesmen were hailing the growth in their party's strength as a miraculous "victory," comparable to the Democratic Party upset in the 1948 United States elections.

Nearly 30 million Japanese went to the polls, casting the biggest vote in Japanese history. Only 40 million were eligible to cast ballots.

Wilkins, jr., and William E. Leahy are general cochairmen of the local drive, with offices in the Woodward Building.

Mental Observation Law Sought for 'Reservations'

The Justice Department yesterday asked Congress to enact a law that would permit sending persons of apparently unsound mind, found on Federal reservations in the Washington suburban area, to St. Elizabeths Hospital for observation.

The request for legislation was sent to Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) by Peyton Ford, assistant to the Attorney General. The proposed bill was referred to the House Judiciary Committee. A similar bill was presented to the last Congress.

Ford, in a letter, said that "the rapid increase in Federal offices and Federal personnel in nearby Virginia and Maryland has given rise to difficulties in dealing with cases of mental diseases arising in these areas."

The bill would apply to Federal reservations in Arlington or Fairfax Counties, Va.; Alexandria, Va., or Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Md. The commitment to St. Elizabeths would be for 30 days' observation and for diagnosis periods.

Time Limit Placed On Trade Hearings

But Muffed It

Huebner Says Nazis Got D-Day Plan

Heidelberg, Germany, Jan. 24 (U.P.)—The Germans captured the Allies' Normandy invasion plan in 1944, but muffed their opportunity by not getting the document back to their commander in time.

This was revealed today by Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, chief of American Ground Forces in Europe.

Explaining that the plan had been captured on the Omaha beachhead in the initial phase of the Normandy landing, Huebner said: "Had that paper been recognized for its true value, the entire outcome of the war might have been different."

[High Army officers in Washington couldn't recall any such incident. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff, didn't remember anything like it, and said he doubted if the over-all invasion plan would have been taken ashore that early in the invasion. Checking into the records, officials late in the day came up with a statement in an official history, published months ago, that the battle operation plans of the Seventh Corps were captured on D-plus-2 Day. The history, however, then went on to say how the enemy took advantage of this knowledge. And Army officials said this battle order would not have contained the over-all plan mentioned by Huebner.—Editor's note.]

Huebner spoke at a critique conducted by officers who participated last week in American winter maneuvers in Germany. He said the maneuvers along the Rhine River proved that American troops in Germany were fit and able to function under winter conditions.

Spring maneuvers will be held in Germany in April, Huebner announced.

[The United Press said General Huebner disclosed that a full United States combat corps is now operating in Germany and appealed to his line commanders to keep their men ready for any emergency. He said the combat corps consists of the First Infantry Division and three armored cavalry regiments.]

Chile Recalls Ambassador From Caracas

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 24 (U.P.)—The foreign office, reacting to Venezuela's withdrawal of her Ambassador here, announced today that Ambassador Rodrigo Gonzales had been recalled from Caracas.

The action did not constitute a break in diplomatic relations. The foreign office said First Secretary Oscar Echeverria would remain at Caracas as charge d'affaires.

The clash between Chile and Venezuela originated with the Chilean appeal to the Organization of American States to investigate Venezuela's refusal to grant a safe-conduct guarantee to its former President Romulo Betancourt, who had been in asylum in Colombia's Caracas Embassy since a military coup overthrew President Romulo Gallegos.

(Betancourt was allowed to leave Venezuela early yesterday on an air trip expected to take him eventually to the United States. The OAS council in Washington decided today not to act specifically on the Betancourt situation because the problem had already been solved.

(However, the council voted to establish a seven-nation committee to decide whether the OAS should intervene in such questions in the future, or whether the countries concerned should be required to settle them "out of court.")

Venezuela recalled her ambassador from Santiago as a protest against Chile's interference in "matters that are not of its concern."

Adm. Nimitz Feels 3000 Miles Is Top Bombing Range

Although modern planes have far greater range, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz believes 3000 miles is the maximum radius for effective bombing.

The wartime Pacific Fleet Commander and former Chief of Naval Operations expressed that view yesterday in United States News and World Report, weekly news magazine.

Some time in the future, Nimitz said, a greater radius than a 6000-mile round trip may be feasible but there still is the matter of increased fuel requirements.

"It is always less costly and more efficient to operate aircraft from advance bases, thereby increasing the ratio of bombs to fuel to the maximum, while decreasing fuel consumption to the minimum," he said.

The Administration launched a concerted drive on Capitol Hill yesterday to get rid of the limitations and delays written into the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act by the Republican Eightieth Congress.

President Truman, in a letter to Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee, asked for speedy repeal of what he called the "hampering restrictions" of the 1948 act.

Thorp Calls for Speed

And Assistant Secretary of State Willard Thorp, at a public hearing of the committee, called for prompt action in view of impending negotiations for trade agreements with 13 additional countries.

Democrats on the committee were so sure of having the votes, and so anxious to speed the hearings, that most of them declined to question Thorp at all. Representative John D. Dingell (D., Mich.) simply assured Thorp that "we of the majority are sold entirely on the idea."

But the Republicans had plenty to say against tariff reductions and against any liberalizing of the act as the Republican Congress wrote it.

Their ranking member, Representative Daniel Reed (R., N. Y.), drew the name of Alger Hiss into the hearing, with the implication that the State Department had put Hiss in charge of the "propaganda" against the Republican bill last year.

Citizen Committee Aide

Thorp explained that Hiss had been executive secretary of a private citizens' committee of 272 men and women, and had testified as a private citizen during last year's Senate Finance Committee hearings. The chairman of the citizens' committee was Gerard Swope, former president of the General Electric Co.

Reed spoke of "Hiss of the State Department"; Thorp answered that he was not in the State Department at the time. Reed suggested that the American people should fear any proposal advocated by an official with "a record of peddling secret information to our enemies"; Thorp called this question "irrelevant."

Reed next charged that 9 of the 101 trade experts who negotiated the trade agreements at Geneva in 1947 had been "fellow travelers or Communists." Thorp just as emphatically said there was not one among the Americans who went to Geneva at that time.

"If I were an industrialist," said Representative Richard Simpson (R., Pa.), "I'd be worried this morning for fear that you might trade him off for some political consideration."

"Then I suggest," Thorp replied, "that you look at the record of the trade agreements program over 14 years. You will find it amazingly barren of any such instances."

Thorp cited four reasons why the act should be extended for three years and why the one-year extension, as approved by the Republican Congress, "undermined" the program.

The first was its limited duration of one year, which he said was too short for completing "any sizable negotiation." The second was that it removed the United States Tariff Commission from the group of Government agencies recommending tariff cuts to the President.

The third was that it required the Tariff Commission to propose the extent of tariff reductions "without regard to any national or international considerations" except the protection of an individual industry. And finally, he said, the Republican-written act involved duplication of effort and "a wholly unnecessary burden on all concerned."

President Truman, in his letter to Doughton, recalled that negotiations would begin in April to bring 13 additional countries into the Geneva agreement of 1947, which he called "the most important and comprehensive trade agreement in history."

"Unless nations can sell each other the products of their agriculture, labor and industry to the greatest possible extent," the President wrote, "there can be no sure foundation for economic peace.

"Unless world trade is increased, the tremendous investment we are making toward economic recovery will be largely wasted. Unless trade restrictions are relaxed, the lot of the private trader in international trade will become increasingly difficult.

"The trade agreements program has proved itself to the people of the United States. It has just earned their overwhelming support. We must be in a position to press that program with vigor."

Bill to Boost GI Home Loan Rates Offered

Senator Thomas (D., Utah) introduced yesterday a bill to raise interest rates on veterans' home loans from 4 to 4½ per cent. The idea, he said, is to attract more investors.

Loan agencies and similar groups have been urging an increase in the interest which is now fixed at 4 per cent by the Veterans' Administration. Veterans' Administrator Carl Gray, jr., has rejected proposals for a higher rate.

Thomas said the GI home loans have been falling off "at an alarming rate." His bill also would:

1. Extend the time for repayment of the loans from 25 to 30 years.

2. Provide for financing of loans through one lending agency.

3. Authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make available one billion dollars for this financing.

Bills to Extend and Strengthen Rent Control For Two Years Introduced in Both Houses

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Specially tagged for rush action, the Administration's bill to extend and strengthen rent control for the next two years was dropped in the hopper of both houses of Congress yesterday.

The new measure, prohibiting any more "voluntary" 15 per cent rent control hikes, is slated to replace the present Federal and District rent control laws which expire March 31, nine weeks from today.

The Administration bill would give Housing Expediter Tighe R. Woods authority to reimpose rental ceilings on previously decontrolled areas and sharply increase his power to enforce the law.

House Hearings First

The measure was based on recommendations by Woods, heads of other Federal housing agencies and President Truman's economic advisers. It was introduced by the chairmen of the Banking Committees in each House, Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) and Representative Brent Spence (D., Ky.).

Under an agreement between the two committees, the House group will hold hearings first, possibly beginning next week. The Senate group will wait until the House acts, but congressional leaders have given top priority to rent control because of the early expiration of the present law.

The bill would:

1. Extend rent control for two years, until March 31, 1951, as President Truman recommended in his State of the Union message. All controls could be relaxed before that time, however, by presidential proclamation or by a joint congressional resolution declaring the rental emergency ended.

2. Landlords and tenants would be forbidden to sign leases providing for so-called "voluntary" 15 per cent rent increases.

Would Restore Controls

3. Property covered by 15 per cent increase leases, now held to be decontrolled, would go back under immediate control at the 15 per cent increase level. At the present time once such a lease has been signed the rent can be still further increased if the tenant who made the lease vacates the property.

4. Controls would be restored over hotel accommodations not rented to transients on June 30, 1947. The Administration declared in a statement that this would affect some 500,000 hotel apartments rented to permanent guests.

5. Converted housing accommodations, now automatically decontrolled, would be restored to controls until and unless the housing expediter ruled that the conversion provided additional family living units.

6. Controls over housing not rented for 24 months between February 1, 1945, and March 30, 1948, would be restored.

7. Control over evictions would be restored to the Office of the Housing Expediter. Under present law tenants can be evicted by local courts, according to widely varying State laws. Administration spokesmen said that evictions had proved to be much more difficult under Federal control.

8. The Housing Expediter would be given the power to sue rent violators for triple damages for rent control violations. At the present time only a tenant can sue for the amount he has been overcharged and few tenants have exercised such rights.

9. The Housing Expediter would also be given the right to seek criminal prosecution of repeated and wilful violators of the law. He would be allowed to subpena witnesses and records.

10. Local rent control boards would continue to have the power to recommend that ceilings be raised or controls lifted. If such a recommendation is rejected by the Housing Expediter, however, the local board would have to file a complaint before the case goes to the Emergency Court of Appeals. Under present law such cases go to the court automatically.

11. The new law continues the preference given veterans to buy or rent new living quarters not built for owner occupancy.

Woods, and other Administration spokesmen, have said that rent control is more needed now than ever because the shortage of rental housing is more serious than ever. Real estate groups have already announced they will fight any extension of rent control beyond March 31.

Some Democrats have questioned whether or not a two-year extension is necessary. One is Sparkman, who said yesterday he still favored a 15-month extension, but had an open mind on the need for the full 24-months proposed by the Administration.

Action by Rent Control Office Saves Tenants $527,520.96

Action by the District Rent Control Office has saved Washington tenants $527,520.96 in the last six months.

On an average, local landlords asked for a 15.54 per cent rent increase, and the average boost granted by the Rent Control Board after public hearings was 9.18 per cent during the same period.

These highlights were revealed in Rent Control Administrator Robert Cogswell's semiannual report to the Commissioners yesterday, which also stated that the largest number of landlords petitioned for rent hikes last year than in any year since the rent law became effective in 1942.

A total of 30,599 Washington landlords asked for rent increases last year, which is 12,300 more than in any previous year, the Cogswell report showed.

He attributed his exceptionally heavy 1948 case load to the fact that landlords rushed to get more rent when it became clear last spring that rent control would be extended.

In the last six months Cogswell said his office has disposed of 14,221 cases, with 1525 under consideration at the present time.

He said 63 violations of rent ceilings were discovered in cases reported to the Rent Control Board, resulting in $5030.89 actual cash refunds to tenants affected.

Maritime Dry Dock Plan Stirs Dispute

John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A Maritime Commission plan to install dry docks at its six "mothball' fleet sites has stirred up a heated controversy in shipping circles.

Commission Chairman W. W. Smith contends he can do the necessary maintenance work on the bottoms of the 2342 ships of the reserve fleet, using surplus Navy floating dry docks and Civil Service workmen, at about half the cost of sending the craft to commercial shipyards.

The private yards charge the plan an entering wedge for the establishment of additional Government ship repair yards and "fundamentally opposed to our political and social ideals."

None of the merchant vessels in the "mothball" fleet has been drydocked since the end of the war, and most are badly in need of immediate scraping, the commission declares. Shipbuilders agree, but contend that as a vital defense industry, they should have the work.

"Serious Blow"

In a letter to Smith dated January 19, the Shipbuilders Council of America protested the plan as "a serious blow to the private shipbuilding and ship repairing industry of the United States, detrimental to national security which requires the preservation and strengthening of that industry and of doubtful financial advantage to the Government."

Individual shipyards have written to the Senate Expenditures Committee, and intend to strongly oppose the proposal when the Maritime Commission asks the House Appropriations Committee to provide funds for the program.

The commission has prepared a detailed survey of the relative costs of dry-docking its ships in private yards compared with doing the work at reserve fleet sites.

This study shows the work can be accomplished at the reserve fleet sites for $54,195,987, while it will cost $102,124,941 at private yards.

Towing Charges Cited

Much of this added cost will be eaten up by the charge of towing ships from their present moorings to distant shipyards, it was said.

The commission plan does not contemplate that any actual repair work would be done by Civil Service workmen. Vessels would have their bottoms sandblasted and painted at the reserve fleet site, it is planned. In the process, a survey will be made of any needed repair work and the latter will be put out to commercial yards on a competitive bid basis.

Approximately 1000 ships in the fleet now require repairs averaging $180,000 per vessel, the Maritime Commission's survey estimates. This work would go to private yards once the condition of each vessel is definitely determined, it was said.

A proposal to spend 165 million dollars on such work was submitted to the Bureau of the Budget last year, the commission revealed, but was turned down as having "insufficient priority" in the overall defense program.

Since then, a smaller repair program covering 258 ships and costing 50 million dollars has been prepared, it was stated. However, until a dry-docking shows exactly what is needed for each ship, firm estimates cannot be written.

Should a ship be sent to a shipyard to have its bottom scraped and repaired without such knowledge, the Government would have to pay "emergency" rates for whatever repair work is performed at that time.

The only alternative, commission officials say, is to dock a ship for scraping only, and then draw up bids for what work is found necessary. While bids are being advertised, the ship has to be taken out of drydock and then put back, perhaps at another yard.

20-Year Program

The commission contends that only 60 men will be needed at each reserve fleet site to drydock and survey ships. The 54-million-dollar scraping and painting program would be spread over 20 years.

But the Shipbuilders Council contends that whatever the present commission chairman now says, the Government in time will start making minor repairs on vessels not needing extensive work. Cranes, welding equipment, machine shops and other essentials of a repair ward would be bought for such work and gradually the drydock would take on major repairs.

"The drydocking and repair of merchant vessels in peacetime normally constitutes the livelihood of the ship repairing branch of the industry," stated the council. "Like the shipbuilding branch of the industry, the ship-repairing branch is essential to national security, and it will not be available to perform its wartime functions unless it can remain a healthy and progressive industry in peacetime.

"It would be ironical if the successful effort of the industry in creating a merchant fleet under the leadership and with the support of the commission since 1936 and especially during the war should lead to the destruction or crippling of the industry."

No Complaints

Chaplain Testifies at Camp Trial

Fort Meade, Md., Jan. 24 (AP).—An Army chaplain flown home from Germany testified today he had heard no complaints about mistreatment at a Wurzburg prison camp two months ago.

Four officers are charged with neglecting their duty at the rehabilitation camp for American soldiers. The chaplain, Maj. John N. Hudson, testified in behalf of Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., of Philadelphia, a medical officer at the camp.

Testimony Attacked

The prosecution attempted to show that Major Hudson was not at Wurzburg during the time in question, December of 1946 and January of 1947.

The chaplain said he had helped put down a mutiny of white and Negro prisoners soon after he arrived. He explained, however, that this was not in the section for solitary confinement.

The main witness against Captain Holmes was Pvt. Joseph Suggs, a Negro soldier still under treatment at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington. He lost both feet and part of one leg when they were frozen. He charged that prison officers took away all but two blankets and refused him medical treatment.

Shoeless for Reason

Another defense witness testified today that prisoners in the solitary confinement cells could keep their feet warmer by not wearing heavy GI shoes.

He was Dr. Edgar L. Etier of Fort Worth, Tex., camp surgeon at Wurzburg.

He said the men in solitary were deprived of their shoes so they could exercise their feet better to keep them warm when they were wearing only the heavy wool socks they were issued.

Dr. Etier said it was extremely cold at the time Suggs was confined, but that he had not known of any frost-bitten feet among the prisoners.

Mrs. William W. White, Washington, D. C., saves at Columbia Federal because she's efficient.

The convenient location appeals to her. Right next door to the Gas Company, and just across Eleventh Street from Woodward & Lothrop's North Building, Columbia Federal is in the heart of the shopping district. Efficient Mrs. White saves steps while she builds her savings account, for whenever she comes downtown she's almost always within convenient visiting distance.

Mrs. White is one of thousands who save regularly at Columbia Federal. Some choose it because, like Mrs. White, they find the location so convenient. Others select Columbia Federal because they want the extra protection afforded by Federal Savings Insurance*. And everyone likes the liberal dividends credited to savings accounts semi-annually. (Columbia Federal paid $237,934.10 in dividends in 1948).

You are invited to open a savings account at Columbia Federal. It can be as small—or as large—as you wish. Additions or withdrawals may be made at any time. Drop in. We'll be pleased to discuss our facilities with you.

'Axis Sally' Trial Jury Is Selected jury as finally selected as the defenses used 19 of its limit of 20 challenges and the prosecution used four, waiving the remaining 16.

Five others who said they opposed capital punishment (treason carries a penalty of from 5 years and $10,000 fine to death) and seven who said they had fixed opinion about the case, were not placed on the final panel.

Judge Curran began the inquisition by instructing the veniremen to stand if they could answer in the affirmative to any of the following questions:

"Can any of you read German?" (two arose.)

"Have any of you ever lived in Germany?" (two arose.)

Quizzed on Organizations

"Have any of you been a member of the following: American Patriots Inc.; Ausland Organization of NSDAP; Association of German Nationals; German-American National Alliance; Citizens Protective League; Dante Alighieri Society; Federation of Italian War Veterans; Friends of New Germany; German-American Bund; German-American Vocational League, or any organization called a German-American organization?" (none arose.)

"Have any of you listened to the German or Italian shortwave radio during the war?" (none arose.)

"Are any of you opposed to the declaration of war by the United States against Germany in December, 1941?" (None arose.)

"Are any of you Jews?" (Seven arose.)

"Are any of you prejudiced in favor of or against Jews?" (None arose.)

"Were any of you for or against the policies of Roosevelt and Churchill?" (None arose.)

"Are any of you prejudiced for or against Englishmen?" (None arose.)

"Have any of you a fixed opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant?" (Seven arose.)

Listen to Winchell?

"Do any of you listen regularly to Walter Winchell?" (8 arose.)

"Do any of you listen to Drew Pearson?" (13 arose.)

Other questions ranged from whether any had seen a movie called "GI Joe" to whether any personally knew Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, one-time adviser to President Roosevelt.

The panel was also quizzed as to membership in the B'nai B'rith, the Anti-defamation League, the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League or any "organized Jewish political group."

At one point Judge Curran cautioned the panel "this case is a serious matter and the defendant is entitled to a fair and unbiased jury . . ."

He suggested that the prospective jurors examine their consciences to see if "any reason suggested" why impartial judgment could not be rendered.

The first Government witnesses expected to be called are Adelbert Houben, now of Huntington, Pa., and Hans Von Richter of California, both identified as former high German radio officials.

Miss Gillars, slim and attractive despite the ordeal of war and imprisonment that turned her once jet-black hair into silver-gray, appeared chastely garbed in a black dress.

A modest necklace was the only jewelry. Her small, still-piquant features carried a minimum of makeup.

Specifically, she is charged with broadcasting a propaganda line under the name of "Midge at the Mike," calculated to make Americans, especially soldiers, feel that the war was a conspiracy against the best interests of the United States at a time when a deadly struggle with the Axis was in progress.

Recordings of several wartime broadcasts allegedly made by Miss Gillars are slated to be played in the courtroom during the trial.

Among the spectators in the courtroom was Mrs. Edna Mae Herrick of Ashtabula, Ohio, half-sister of Miss Gillars. The two women embraced and conversed quietly under the eyes of two deputy United States marshals during a recess.

Following the first day's proceedings, the defendant was led to a police van for her trip back to District Jail while a mob of cameramen and the idly curious milled about the exit from District Court.

The trial will resume at 10 a. m. today.

best be applied under the somewhat different problems which prevail in the United Kingdom."

The ocean crossing will be paid for in pounds sterling; the visits in the United States will be financed by ECA dollars, out of a fund earmarked for technical services.

An ECA spokesman said yesterday that there was no intention to send the visitors on long tours around the United States. Each team of 15 will be split into groups of two or three each, and will spend its time here in one or two factories corresponding to their own industries in Great Britain.

Electrical workers, for example, will be put to work in the General Electric plant in Schenectady, N. Y., or in the Westinghouse plant at Pittsburgh. The intention is to find American methods of saving space or speeding up output which could be applied in the British struggle for recovery.

In addition to the committee on productivity, which is sending the groups of workers here, Reed said the joint Anglo-American council had set up four other committees.

The first is studying the level of productive plant and power in a number of British industries. The second is examining the problem of measuring productivity in the two countries.

The third is looking into the specialized production of parts and components by certain American factories which then supply these parts to the companies making the end products. This specialization, Reed reports, has no parallel in British industry as yet.

Finally, a committee is making an immediate study of the types of information that would spur productivity among managers and workers.

American and British businessmen and labor union leaders alike are working on the entire joint effort, which Reed reported yesterday "has made a good start."

Dr. Lucas Quits Post at St. Albans

Canon Lucas

Dr. Albert Hawley Lucas, 54-year-old headmaster of St. Albans, the National Cathedral School for Boys, for the past 20 years, has resigned his post, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Lucas' resignation, which was submitted Friday to the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, was accepted by the Chapter of the Washington Cathedral and becomes effective June 30.

Commenting on the resignation, Bishop Dun, who also heads the chapter of the Cathedral, said he felt the "greatest sorrow" at Canon Lucas' decision to leave the school.

The resignation also was accepted with "great reluctance and regret" by the board of governors of the school.

In his letter to the board of governors, Dr. Lucas said:

"At the time I was appointed headmaster of St. Albans in 1929, he said, I told Dr. (James E.) Freeman, then Bishop of Washington, I should ask to be released upon conclusion of 20 years of service providing my work was acceptable during the intervening years. That time is now at hand. This decision is irrevocable; my sorrow over this surrender of so great a trust is immeasurable."

Miss Mabel B. Turner, principal of the National Cathedral School for Girls, is also to retire, effective June 30, 1950, according to an earlier announcement from the cathedral.

Miss Turner, in her letter to the board, pointed out that she will have completed 21 years as principal as of her resignation's effective date, and that she feels "a change of leadership at this time is wise." The school is also under the authority of the Cathedral Chapter of the Washington Cathedral.

Seven German Officials To Study U. S. Methods

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP).—Seven German officials are going to Washington to learn about United States government.

The United States military government said today the group will leave Wednesday for five months of practical experience in American public life.

When they return, said Dr. Edward P. Litchfield, "they may be able to advance inside Germany a relatively new idea: Public cooperation with government through understanding, rather than public obedience through decree."

The six men and a woman making the trip were chosen for their qualifications in civil or government work. Some were underground workers against the Nazis.

In Washington the Budget Bureau will direct the visitors' study of various Governmental operations.

action, particularly in view of Chief Judge Stephens' dissent, and if there is no reversal of the appellate court action the case will be carried to the Supreme Court.

In Pittsburgh, Charles J. Margiotti, who represented the Garssons, said he would ask the Supreme Court to review the case.

Among defense contentions was the claim that testimony given by May and Henry Garsson to the Senate War Investiagting Committee should have been excluded from the trial because May testified voluntarily and Henry Garsson refused to waive his constitutional rights to testify against himself.

Judges Prettyman and Edgerton, however, said Garsson actually answered committee questions, as did May, and while the Constitution prohibits such use of answers when a witness is compelled to testify, "it does not provide that what a man says voluntarily may not be used against him."

The prosecution charged that May's payments were made through a "dummy" firm, the Cumberland Lumber Co., but the defense countered that any aid May gave the Garssons in securing contracts was of a "patrotic" nature in the course of his normal duties.

On this point, the majority opinion declared:

"That money was received by May from the Garssons is not disputed . . . (but) . . . if a Congressman receives compensation for services rendered by him to a person in relation to any matter in which the United States is interested, before any Government department, he is guilty of violating the statute, even though the service rendered was a proper act on his part."

While the Appeals Court majority found "some force in appellants' argument" on one of many points on which the indictment itself was challenged—that the law appears to make illegal only the acceptance of a bribe—there is a general law that makes illegal the aiding and abetting of any offense, said the majority opinion.

In reply to the claim that the indictment charged more than one conspiracy, to conspire to commit offenses against the Government and to defraud the Government—the majority said, "That the single conspiracy was to commit two offenses makes no difference."

Chief Judge Stephens disagreed, saying "the two crimes cannot be charged in the same count," and he added, "it is not legally possible to make the commission of such an offense the subject of a conspiracy charge. It is like charging a conspiracy to conspire."

Under the bribery statute involved, he said, only the Congressman accepting a bribe can be punished, and not the person giving the bribe, ". . . Congress having evidenced its intention that such persons go unpunished" by not including them in the law.

May, defeated for reelection in 1946 after eight straight terms in Congress, is at his home in Prestonsburg, Ky. At his trial, his attorneys said he then had "no financial substance." Henry and Murry Garsson, and three of their associates in their Illinois munitions combine, in March, 1947, were indicted in Baltimore on charges of swindling the Government out of "large amounts" of money by concealing funds subject to excess war profits. That charge is still pending.

Cotton and Wheat Curbs Are Planned

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan yesterday told Congress he is taking steps to hold down plantings of cotton and wheat this year.

He will announce soon, he said, that acreage planted to either crop this year will not be used as a basis for figuring future acreage allotments in case crop controls are reimposed under the price support law.

Crop controls usually are based upon the average acreage seeded to specific crops in each five-year period. Many farmers, officials fear, have been planting unusually large amounts of cotton and wheat in order to increase their allotments, should crop controls be again ordered.

Storms Hit Beef Supply, Says Brannan

Beef may be scare on American tables next year because of the loss of cattle in recent Western snowstorms, Secretaary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan said last night.

Secretary Brannan, speaking at a meeting of the Women's National Democratic Council at the Washington Club, estimated a possible 15 per cent loss of cattle on the ranges.

"This will have its impact on the market," he said, "but in the total meat supply it will not be catastrophic. At worst it will delay the program set to restore the beef supply to normal."

The big meat supply will come from hogs next year, the Secretary said, with ham and pork chops in good supply.

Truman Calls For Columbia Valley Project

President Truman yesterday announced that Government agencies have been directed to prepare legislation immediately for a Columbia Valley Authority, patterned after, but probably differing considerably, from the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The agencies concerned are the Army Engineers, Interior Department, Agriculture Department, Commerce Department, Budget Bureau, Federal Power Commission and the Council of Economc Adyisers.

Although experts in all these agencies have given considerable attention to this study in recent years, White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross predicted it might be several weeks before any legislation will be ready.

Varied Reaction

The White House announcement was greeted in the Pacific Northwest in varied ways. Business leaders, generally opposed to a valley development program, cautiously withheld comment pending presentation of legislation. Labor leaders unanimously approved it and a bitter fight is promised.

Kennard Jones, president of the Spokane Pacific Northwest Development Association, called a CVA "socialistic" and said the plan would give political appointees "dictatorial powers."

Albert Leslie, secretary of the Spokane Central Labor Council, said: "You can expect to hear cries of socialism from the people who will be against a CVA. You always hear such cries when anything for the people is proposed.

Oregon's Republican Gov. Douglas McKay asked: "What's the matter with the way we're doing it now? We don't need to delegate authority to a board or a commission to regulate the economy of the Northwest."

J. D. McDonald of the Oregon State Federation of Labor, expressed pleasure with Mr. Truman's action, as did Stanley Earl of the CIO. The Oregon State Grange, which urged such action only two days ago, echoed the labor unions' praise.

The Interior Department prepared a voluminous report on the Columbia River Basin about a year ago. Copies were sent to Agriculture and Commerce for comment. Recently, the Army Engineers prepared another long report, known as the "308 Report" which reached the other offices a short time ago.

The agencies addressed by President Truman on the subject make up an interagency group known as the National Resources Development Committee, which has been carrying on a continuing study of valley resources development for several years. Another regional group, the Columbia Basin Development, has been making a study restricted to the Columbia Basin in the Northwest.

Division of Work

The division of work on the program will be:

Interior Department—Reclamation, power, administration.

Amry—Engineering plans, flood control, navigation and power.

Agriculture Department—Agriculture, forestry, soil conservation, etc.

Another agency called in for advice and aid in matters concerning water pollution is the Public Health Service.

When the agencies have prepared the bill, Mr. Truman will send it to the Capitol backed by a special message, White House officials said.

One of the problems that must be settled by the planners is the extent of the area of the authority. Some plans have limited the "basin" to the political boundaries of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and a part of Wyoming. Other plans have taken in all the natural basin, which would add a small part of Nevada, Utah and Montana. The source of the Columbia is in Canada.

The authority may include several "basins" in the Northwest. Among these are the Puget Sound Basin, the Snake and the Klamath Rivers, as well as many smaller streams.

Representative Hugh B. Mitchell (D., Wash.) would add a twist to the CVA not included in the TVA. That would provide for an advisory council, appointed by the governors of the States involved in the authority, which would make periodic reports on the progress.

In his letter to the agencies, Mr. Truman said, "it is most important that concrete legislative proposals for such an authority in the Columbia Basin be developed on a sound basis, taking into account characteristics and needs of the region, the interests of all parts of the executive branch and the lessons of our prior experience with the kinds of operations which will be involved."

Long-Time Advocate

Mr. Turman long has been an advocate of authority development for great river basins. He reaffirmed that stand in his opening message to the new Congress. He long ago endorsed a Missouri Valley Authority, which has encountered opposition from all 10 States in the region.

After a recent White House visit, Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) reported Mr. Truman is still strong for an MVA. Murray is the chief proponent of the huge Missouri River project in Congress.

President Truman named Charles F. Murphy, administrative assistant, as coordinator of the work of the various agencies. Interior Secretary Krug appointed Assistant Secretary C. Girard Davidson, former counsel for the Bonneville Power Administration, to work with Murphy. The Bonneville project would be a part of any CVA. Davidson also formerly was an attorney for TVA.

Senate Fight on Filibusters May Itself Face a Filibuster

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A proposed change in Senate rules to control filibuster in turn appeared headed for filibuster as a Senate committee opened hearings yesterday on five separate debate-limiting resolutions.

The Senate Rules Committee, led by Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) heard Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) appeal for majority vote "cloture" as the only way to avert "minority rule" in the Senate.

Hayden himself said he favored tightening the present rule to make it possible to close debate by a two-thirds vote. He predicted a majority of his committee will support "some changes" in the rules.

Southern opponents of the President's civil rights program told newsmen, however, they will fight "any change" in the present debate code, whether the proposal is to end debate by a two-thirds or majority vote.

With the old ineffectual rules still on the books, some 20 Southern Democrats thus are in a position to talk without limit against any motion to call up the rules change.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) told reporters the Rules Committee ought to meet the filibuster challenge by holding morning and afternoon hearings and hurrying the debate limit to the floor "not later than February 1."

Knowland, a minority member of the rules group, said he will offer a motion to this effect when the committee resumes hearings today. Unless the rules change can be considered near the start of the session, when the Senate can spare time to break a filibuster, it will be "kicked aside" for other business, he said.

At the outset of yesterday's hearing, Hayden told the committee the issue boiled down to "whether a mere majority or two thirds of the Senators voting shall be able to bring debate to a close."

"There is no disposition on the part of a majority of this committee to delay a report recommending that Rule 22 (two-thirds vote cloture) be made effective on all occasions," he said.

"The committee, however, is compelled to consider what may happen to its recommendations when they reach the floor of the Senate. It is well known that there are a considerable number of Senators who, to say the least, are not enthusiastic about any change in the cloture rule.

"Under that rule, as now in effect, they will have the right to debate indefinitely the question . . ."

Pointing out that it will take a two-thirds Senate majority in any case to vote the change, Hayden added:

"From a practical standpoint the burden of proof rests heavily upon those who advocate majority cloture. They must not only demonstrate why it should be done, but how it can be done."

Senator Morse, author of one of the debate-limiting resolutions, then opened the case for majority vote cloture.

Morse argued that the present two-thirds vote cloture rule had succeeded in limiting debate only 4 times in 19 attempts to invoke it.

Saying most of the objections to majority vote cloture are "more theoretical than real," he contended the number of votes necessary to shut off debate should be no greater than the number required to pass a bill.

Lend-lease, the European Recovery Program and every declaration of war has been approved by a mere majority vote, Morse said, adding:

"If it is safe to trust the Senate . . . to pass such important legislation by a simple majority, then it should be sound and safe for the Senate to get itself into a position to act on legislation by a simple majority vote."

Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.), whose father broke some filibustering records in the Senate, asked Morse a few questions. Long asked if a majority of the Senate couldn't break a filibuster if it wanted to, and if Senators shouldn't have the right to "delay" legislation aimed at their section "until the country is informed."

Morse said filibusters could be broken if they are made a sheer test of physical endurance "but I thought we were a long way removed from decisions by combat. We ought to fight it out on the merits of arguments."

He said his debate limitation would still permit the country to be adequately "informed," since it allows an additional 96 hours of debate after cloture is voted.

At the close of Morse's statement Hayden argued that very little legislation had actually been defeated by filibuster—that except for the anti-poll tax bill most filibuster measures have eventually become law in some form.

Morse replied that in most of those cases compromises and revisions were the result. Hayden said the late Speaker Champ Clark told him when he first came to Congress that no legislator ever had his own way about a bill—that "all legislation is compromise."

"Yes," said Morse, "but I object to compromises being forced down my throat at the point of a filibuster gun."

Engineers Plan Strike on 15 Roads

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—A strike of 25,000 engineers on 15 Western railroads is set for next Monday but the Government probably will step in to stop it.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers announced today a strike deadline of 6 a. m., January 31, in all time zones. The union wants a second engineer on Diesel locomotives. The roads call it a "make-work" program.

However, President Truman will be asked to appoint an emergency fact-finding board which would postpone a strike for 60 days. The board will have 30 days to investigate and make its reports. The law requires both sides to negotiate on the basis of the board's recommendations for at least 30 days.

The brotherhood previously said extra engineers are needed "to look after the machinery in the back end (of multiple unit Diesels), while the first engineer operates the controls. Safety is a factor in our demands."

Railroads involved in the dispute are: The Great Northern, Northern Pacific; Chicago, Burlington Quincy; Missouri Pacific, Texas Pacific; Athison, Topeka, Santa Fe (lines East and West exclusive of the Coast lines); the Union Pacific Central District (the old Oregon Short Line), the Southern Pacific System, Illinois Central, Chicago North Western, Western Pacific; Chicago, Rock Island, Pacific, St. Louis, San Francisco (the Frisco Lnes), International Great Northern and the Milwaukee Road (East lines).

American Airlines Strike Threat Lessens

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—A union spokesman said late today that American Airlines has "shown a more reasonable attitude" in its wage dispute with the CIO Airlines Communications Employes Association.

The statement indicated a lessening of a possibility of a slowdown or work stoppage today by some 400 communications workers in the lines' terminals.

Earlier, leaders of the union walked out of a meeting with company officials after stating the airline was continuing an "unyielding attitude" on union demands.

Shortly afterward, Mil Senior, international vice president of the association, told newsmen union members were "indignant and unhappy," and added:

"We don't know whether we'll be able to hold them back after 3 p. m. (EST) today.

"We have given the company until 3 p. m. to promise us retroactivity of any wage items we may eventually negotiate and that it will proceed with negotiations."

About an hour after the deadline, however, Senior said the company had "reiterated its willingness to negotiate in good faith" and had "hinted" it would give the union a promise of retroactivity of wage hikes finally negotiated.

A work stoppage would affect the lines' domestic and foreign flights, the union said.

'Horseplay' Case Review Ordered

The Bureau of Employes Compensation here was ordered yesterday by Judge F. Dickinson Letts of District Court to reconsider a $1000 award to a Times-Herald printer who suffered a fractured hip as result of "horseplay" in the composing room there.

The victim was Maxie J. Marinelli, 32, of 5701 Barnabas rd., Oxon Hill, Md. According to Judge Letts findings, on May 6, 1947, Marinelli poked the backside of printer Raymond Hawk, 33, of 504 6th st. nw. Judge Letts said that Hawk became irritated, whirled and pushed Marinelli, who fell and suffered a compound fracture of his hip.

Employes Compensation authorities awarded Marinelli $1000 for the injury and the several months he was out of work recuperating. But the insurer, Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co., appealed the decision, holding that the slap and injury were outside the scope of the employment of newspaper printers.

Judge Letts said that under District law, the aggressor in horseplay is not entitled to compensation. Therefore, he ordered the compensation bureau to reconsider the case and determine who was the aggressor in the action.

Speed Voted On Labor Act

repeals the Taft-Hartley Act and restores the Wagner Act with a five-man National Labor Relations Board. Thomas said he hoped to introduce the Administration amendments to the Wagner Act by Thursday.

Senator Taft, in a jolly mood rather than irate, declared the language of the Pepper resolution, "the most remarkable" he'd ever seen. He insisted the Democrats were trying to cover up the fact that they were taking the "one-package" approach to revising the labor laws instead of the "two-package" plan sought by organized labor.

Senator Morse decried the committee's vote as a "political gesture to labor" which in the end would prove to be a disservice.

Several of the GOP Senators repeated the charge that the Democrats were indulging in face-saving tactics, Senator Pepper, however, declared: "We're not trying to save anybody's face. We're trying to keep our word with the people."

Pepper then added: "We regard that we got rid of the Taft-Hartley Act this afternoon."

At the CIO press conference, Counsel Goldberg said that the CIO was prepared to go along, generally, with the President's suggested amendments to the Wagner Act.

However, Goldberg added, the CIO would vigorously oppose peacetime legislation permitting court injunctions against strikes, Government seizure of struck plants, and establishing the anti-Communist affidavit for union leaders.

"All the anti-Communist affidavit does is to make the Communists in the labor movement civil rights martyrs," Goldberg asserted.

Senate GOP Parley Set to Debate Differences

Senate Young Turk and Old Guard Republicans fell out again yesterday and party leaders called a conference to talk it over.

Senator Eugene D. Milliken (Colo.), Senate GOP conference chairman, invited all Republican Senators to the meeting Thursday morning.

He said the conference was called originally to set up the 1950 Senate Republican campaign committee so Republicans can launch their fight to win back the Senate.

Then a "protest" by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), one of the leaders of the Senate GOP's so-called Young Turk bloc, was added to the agenda.

Morse sent a letter to Millikin protesting the Senate GOP policy committee's action in "instructing" four Republican Senators now en route to the GOP National Committee meeting in Omaha, Nebr.

The four Senators were Senators Kenneth S. Wherry and Hugh A. Butler of Nebraska, who will serve as "host" Senators for the Omaha meeting, and Senators Owen Brewster (Me.) and Homer Capehart (Ind.), who will go to Omaha as representatives of the Senate Republican Campaign committee.

Morse said he had no objection to the selections "although I would question whether they represent a cross section of Republican point of view in the Senate."

"If the policy committee has instructed any delegation from the Senate which will attend the Omaha meeting, I think those instructions should be submitted to the full Republican conference for discussion and possible expression of differences of opinion," Morse added.

A member of the policy group said that none of the four were sent as "delegates" to the GOP meeting — that Wherry and Butler were going anyway and asked the policy committee's "advice."

The same source said that Brewster is slated to head up the new Senate GOP campaign committee, of which Capehart now is vice chairman, and that they went as representatives of the campaign group.

They were "advised" to make it clear to the national committee that Republican legislators expected to be consulted on any moves affecting the congressional campaign. They particularly wanted a say in any decision about holding a between-elections Republican meeting this summer or fall.

As conference chairman, Millikin has authority to name the new Senate Republican campaign committee, but his appointments are subject to conference approval.

Most Capitol Republicans meanwhile were betting on retention of Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr. (R., Pa.) as Republican National Chairman, when the national committee gets around to voting in Omaha.

Scott, handpicked by Governor Dewey in the last campaign, reportedly has the votes to stay on but a fight is expected on the 15-member allegedly "pro-Dewey" executive committee slate Scott named last weekend.

2 Advocate Scott Ouster

Omaha, Jan. 24 (AP).—Two former National Republican Committee chairmen, Carroll Reece and Harrison E. Spangler, said today they believe Representative Hugh D. Scott (R., Pa.) should resign as GOP chairman. Scott said:

"I'm not too concerned when a few people from heavily losing States say the Republican leader should have one hand tied behind his back." He was referring to critics who have said he should resign either as chairman or as a Congressman.

The Democratic national chairman, Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) holds down the double job, Scott said.

Early-arrivers for the meeting included Ralph F. Gates, former Indiana Governor and national committeeman from Indiana.

Asked to comment on reports that he was getting backing from friends of Senator Robert A. Taft and Harold E. Stassen as a successor to Scott, Gates said, "I am not a candidate."

James W. Campbell, 39, of Lynchburg, Va., was sentenced to 20 years in the Virginia State penitentiary yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court on a charge of attempted rape of a 39-year-old Fairfax County woman on January 14.

Campbell, who police said had served an 11-year prison term previously for attempted rape and was a fugitive from the State prison farm near Richmond at the time of his arrest, pleaded guilty to the charge. He said he attacked the woman after both got off a bus on Lee hwy. near Falls Church the night of January 14.

Mud Dropping On Md. Roads Proves Costly

Mud dropped on a Maryland highway by construction trucks cost the superintendent on a Prince Georges County apartment project a $100 fine yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Judge Alan Bowie slapped the fine on Gustavus W. Buchholz, superintendent of an apartment project being built by Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., of Washington, on New Hampshire ave. extended, on complaint of the Maryland State Roads Commission.

J. Paul Smith of Upper Marlboro, resident maintenance engineer for the State Roads Commission, told the court he had warned Buchholz in December and again this month that mud dropped from the trucks must be cleaned off the highway and shoulders. State Trooper J. P. Martinuk also testified he had warned the superintendent.

In assessing the fine, Judge Bowie declared, "The court has the responsibility to protect the traveling public. We pay millions of dollars to build roads and millions to maintain them. It is up to us to help the State Roads Commission."

Two other construction project heads will face like charges in Hyattsville Police Court Monday. They are Jack H. Rosenberg, Standard Construction Co. of Washington, charged with permitting mud on Ager rd. in front of new apartments near West Hyattsville, and Irwin I. Kaplan, Republic Engineering Corp., Silver Spring.

Protestants Admonished On Churches

A congregational clergyman took Protestants to task last night for failing to build churches in which people can experience the presence of God.

Speaking at an institute on church architecture at Hamline Methodist Church, 4501 16th st. nw., the Rev. John R. Scotford asserted that Protestants have "worshiped words," and tried to "talk people into the kingdom of heaven."

Until recently, he said, the Protestant Church has had "nothing to see, and more to hear than anybody wants to hear." Mr. Scotford asserted a successful church should have a message for a man who sits in it, even though he cannot hear.

Scores Architecture

The "nondescript church architecture of the past," he said, reflected the fact that people did not know what they wanted in a church. Most people now realize that a church is a place where they should experience the presence of God, Mr. Scotford declared.

Churches should not be embarrassing to people when they enter, but in most churches at least half of the seats are psychologically unusable because they are too conspicuous, he told the laymen and ministers attending the meeting.

"Cast Out the Junk"

"Get rid of everything irritating," and "cast out the junk" which is not needed was the speaker's advice.

Mr. Scotford is a member of the interdenominational bureau of architecture of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and editor of the congregational magazine Advance. Among other speakers were Philip Hubert Frohman, architect of the Washington Cathedral; Milton L. Grigg, architect of several Alexandria churches; the Rev. Darby W. Betts, rector of St. Clements Episcopal Church, Alexandria, and Slocum Kingsbury, past president of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

Bill Would Raise Minimum Wage

A bill to raise the minimum wage from 40 cents an hour to least 75 cents was presented yesterday to the House Labor Committee.

Chairman Lesinski (D., Mich.) said the measure was written for him by the legislative drafting service. It is not backed by the Administration, he told reporters, nor is he supporting it.

Hearings on the bill will begin Wednesday, he added.

FRANK HALL, Prop. ME. 8580

Bill Proposes U. S.-Backed Theater Setup

Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) yesterday proposed establishment of a federally financed national theater, opera and ballet.

Javits introduced a joint resolution in the House to authorize spending $250,000 for a convention of interested groups to draft a plan for the national theater. The President would convene the group.

After introducing the resolution, Javits told a press conference that Washington would be the most logical place for setting up the central organization of the proposed national organization. But he said the main idea was not a national theater building in Washington, but a central organization that would send traveling companies to areas that now do not have ready access to theatrical, operatic or ballet performances.

Barter Plan Studied

He said the idea of the national theater had drawn some pointers from the Barter Theater in Virginia, which draws financial support from the State. He explained that Robert Porterfield, head of the Barter Theater, is a director of the American National Theater and Academy, a group chartered by Congress in 1935 and now joining in the sponsorship of the national theater plan.

Javits said Washington's lack of a regular theater for stage plays did not prompt introduction of his bill but that the lack here was a "very striking example" of why such legislation is needed.

He estimated that the program would warrant an expenditure of some 25 million dollars a year. He said the idea of a national academy to train talented young people for careers in the theater, opera and ballet was a part of the general plan.

In introducing his bill, Javits told the House that the United States is the only one of the great powers that does not support the theater, opera and ballet as an official Government activity.

Adopted by Britain

He said Great Britain, despite serious economic problems, has just granted some four million dollars for its Arts Council to support a national theater.

He said the plan should not be a "WPA scheme for unemployment relief," but a plan providing democratic control of a national theater, opera and ballet.

He said his bill was backed by Clarence Derwent, president of Actors Equity Association; Lawrence Tibbett, president of the American Guild of Musical Artists; and Vinton Freedley, president of the American National Theater and Academy, and by other officials of these groups.

He said the bill neither proposed, nor did it rule out the possibility, that the American National Theater and Academy would finally be the organization established as the national theater.

Bill Proposes Government College Here

Representative Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.) yesterday introduced a House bill to establish a Government university in or near Washington to train men and women for Federal service.

Bennett proposed that the school be called the Government Service University. He told the House it would provide the Government with more qualified personnel for administrative, diplomatic and other posts.

He explained that the Civil Service Commission would choose the students by competitive examination. Tuition and basic living costs would be paid by the Government. Students would agree to work for the Government for at least 10 years after graduation.

At the head of the university would be a five-member board of trustees, appointed by the President, who also would name a president, subject to Senate confirmation. The job would pay $25,000 a year.

Besides tuition, food, and lodging, students would be paid $780 a year. On admission each student would get $250 for clothing, to be deducted from his pay.

Tamm Nomination To be Reviewed

Nomination of Edward A. Tamm to continue as a Judge of District Court here will be one of 15 Federal judge nominations reviewed by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee in a hearing at 11 a. m. today.

The hearing will be in Room 424 Senate Office Building. Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) is chairman of the subcommittee.

Tamm received a recess appointment to the District bench after the Senate failed to confirm him last year. His nomination then was opposed by the District and American Bar Associations.

Next Season's Budget Listed By Symphony

The National Symphony Orchestra yesterday released an itemized list of its estimated gross income and probably gross expenses, for the 1949-50 concert season.

The symphony expects to take in $220,700 and spend $395,000 during its 24-week season.

However, the $190,000 sustaining fund campaign, which opens February 3, will cover this anticipated $175,000 deficit, plus $15,000 to cover the expected net cost of the Watergate concerts.

Largest single item on next season's estimated budget is $194,000—or half the probable expense total—for salaries of players.

Conductor-elect Howard Mitchell is scheduled to receive $14,000, guest conductors are down for a total of $10,000, and assisting artists will get a total of $12,500.

Other major expense estimates include $20,000 for publicity and advertising; $18,400 for hall rentals, and $18,000 for administration and clerical help.

Program expenses are estimated at $52,000, with gross tour receipts expected to reach $67,000. Tour engageme ts are accepted on a fee basis, and income from them is not dependent upon ticket sales.

The symphony's major estimates on earned income for next year include; $75,000 from the sale of tickets for its regular series; $31,500 from the sale of tickets to the Baltimore series, and $23,000 from extra home concerts such as ballet.

Local Government Survey to Be Asked

In Silver Spring

Trade Board Asks Deputy County Head

The Silver Spring Board of Trade directors yesterday asked appointment of a deputy Montgomery County manager to administer the county's Silver Spring office.

The request was accompanied by a protest against the proposed transfer of certain county functions from the Silver Spring office to Rockville.

The transfer plan, suggested by Acting County Manager I. C. McNayr, is to come up at a meeting of the Montgomery County Council at 9 a. m. today in the Court House at Rockville.

Adopting a committee report, the Board of Trade directors declared the deputy county manager would give the populous Silver Spring area representation in the county government. The area now, it was claimed, has no such representation.

The deputy manager would supervise the Silver Spring office, and look after the Silver Spring area generally, it was pointed out.

In their resolution opposing McNayr's plan to shift county functions, the director's said the transfer would result in inconvenience to Silver Spring business and professional men who would have to travel to Rockville to do business with the county government.

A committee report expressed the belief it would be "inadvisable" for the council to adopt the transfer proposal until a "definite" program of county reorganization is worked out.

Prince Georges County commissioners today are expected to seek a local government survey of the county by the University of Maryland.

According to Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters, several county organizations will send representatives to the commissioners' meeting at 10 a. m. to make the request. The commissioners, she said, must ask the university to make the survey.

The survey would be conducted, she said by Dr. Joseph M. Ray, director of the Bureau of Public Administration and head of the University's Department of Government and Politics as a public service.

Other groups expected to be represented today, Mrs. Bogdanoff said, will be the Prince Georges Civic Federation, county units of the Maryland Grange, the Federation of Women's Clubs, American Association of University Women, Landover Women's Club, County Homemakers' Club, and the Greenbelt Chapter of the American Veterans Committee.

Too Many Others, Charges Wife of Edward Arnold

Hollywood, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Edward Arnold, perennial papa of the movies, was sued for separate maintenance today on grounds he played daddy to real-life cuties who weren't his daughters.

Mrs. Olive Arnold claimed "he refused to have marital relations with me, claiming he was tired. All he'd promise was, 'Well, I will get around to you eventually.'"

Mrs. Arnold said while she was waiting he "got around" to "various women," including some already with husbands.

Mrs. Evelyn Spivak Obtains Divorce

Mrs. Evelyn Spivak, 3135 M st. nw., obtained a divorce yesterday on grounds of adultery from Leon Spivak, real estate man, of 1350 Tewkesbwry pl. nw.

Mrs. Spivak told District Court her spouse made $6000 a year. Spivak last year was named corespondent in the divorce suit won by Simon Beloff, 1611 Decatur st. nw., a real estate man who claimed Spivak had intimate relations with Beloff's wife, May, of Far Rockaway, N. Y. Mrs. Spivak was awarded $50 a month alimony by Judge Matthew F. McGuire.

Sen. McClelland Opposes Any Reduction of GAO

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) said yesterday he is opposed to a plan of the Hoover Commission on Government Organization to whittle down the General Accounting Office, the "watchdog of the Treasury."

He also denounced news "leaks" on the commission's work, as tending to weaken its bipartisan effort to streamline the executive branch of the Government.

McClellan is a member of the commission and also chairman of the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee which will consider all the streamling plans.

He said he will sign a minority report opposing the plan to trim the GAO if it is adopted by the commission in its present form. The plan, as recommended by a commission "task force," would reduce the GAO's personnel and transfer many of its functions to other agencies.

Lawton Urges Reorganizing Bill Approval

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Early enactment of legislation giving President Truman power to reorganize the executive branch of the Government was urged yesterday as "the only feasible method of accomplishing many desirable changes."

The measure also will "permit improvements to be made in the cumbersome administrative structure of the District and also the working out of adjustments in the division of activities between District and Federal agencies," Frederick J. Lawton, assistant director of the Budget, told the House Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Plans for former President Herbert Hoover to testify today were changed because of the absence of two Republican members of the committee, Representatives Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) and Robert F. Rich (Pa.). Mr. Hoover will appear next Monday. Today the chief witness will be Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren.

Proposal Under Fire

The proposed law, offered by Chairman William L. Dawson (D., Ill.) is virtually the same as reorganization laws passed in 1939 and 1945. In spite of this, however, the proposal was under fire from several sections.

Representative Frank M. Karsten (D., Mo.) pointed out that under such a measure, Mr. Truman could order the Marine Corps absorbed by the Army or the Navy air arm made part of the Air Force. Lawton admitted this, and added that had the President wished, he could have done that under the previous measures.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) attacked the measure because "it reverses the constitutional process of legislation." The measure would provide that reorganization ordered by the President would go into effect unless disapproved within 60 days by both houses of Congress.

Reverse Procedure

The Constitution provides that legislation originate in Congress, after which it is subject to veto by the President. The present measure would turn that procedure around, Hoffman argued.

Lawton told the committee that such changes as might be proposed by the President under the measure would have to be accepted "in toto" or all turned down. Congress could, he said, turn down proposed reorganization and then pass a new measure providing the type it wanted instead, he said.

Curator Hails Discovery of Fish Species

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Dr. David H. Dunkle, associate curator of vertebrate paleontology at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum, is currently rubbing his hands over a few fish that are so old they don't even smell.

They are 175-million-years-old fossil specimens found recently in a road cut near Haymarket, Va.

They may give scientists a better idea of the relation of land masses in this country during the Triassic Period, Smithsonian officials say.

The fish, now being studied by Dr. Dunkle, were ancient finny cousins of the modern gar pike, a rather backward fellow himself often referred to as a "living fossil."

Dr. Dunkle, who spent about a day and a half digging up fish fossils, and some plant fossils as well, gave credit for their discovery to W. H. Martin and Francis Baer, physicists from the National Bureau of Standards.

Their discovery indicates the area around Haymarket was covered by a fresh-water lake in the Upper Triassic period, a time when reptiles, including amphibious monsters, were the only other life here besides fish.

It was a long time before the first bird or mammal developed on the earth, Dr. Dunkle said. Many fish, however, had already nearly reached the top of their scale of evolution.

What the Smithsonian's paleontologists will actually have to study are the imprints of the fish in the shale formation where they were preserved, as their bones are crumbling to dust. The fish are identified mostly by the bone structure of their heads.

As for the plants found with them, they are just "odds and ends" of leaves which will be difficult to identify, Dr. Dunkle said.

Suicide Verdict Issued in Death Of Hospital Aide

A 36-year-old cashier at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, died there yesterday 45 minutes after she was found unconscious at her home, 6208 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County coroner, issued a certificate of suicide. He said the woman, Mrs. Anne McCray Rinaldo, apparently had taken poison.

She had been employed at Suburban Hospital for two months, according to hospital authorities.

Police said a note was found addressed to a friend, saying "she could not stand it any longer."

340 Jobless Get D. C. Checks in Fla.

Some 340 unemployed Washingtonians filed applications with the District Unemployment Compensation Board for benefit checks from sunny Florida between December 1, 1947, and November 1, 1948, Board Director C. A. Wharton said last night.

He said at least 50 jobless persons wintered in Florida last month and still received their $5 to $20 unemployment checks from the District.

But it's all on the level, adds Wharton, explaining that remote control payments have applied to all States on a reciprocal basis since 1940.

Wharton said opportunities for wintertime hotel employment in Florida resort towns largely accounts for the many persons on his rolls who presently are in the Alligator State.

"You can be assured," Wharton said, "that all interstate benefits payments are under constant scrutiny for any funny business."

Protest Liquor License

Several members of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A sts. ne., yesterday appeared before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to protest renewal of a Class B license for a delicatessen at 501 A st. ne.

Owner of the delicatessen, Jacob Miller, had applied for a renewal of his license for the off-sale of beer and light wine. The church delegation protested on the grounds the delicatessen adjoins church property.

The ABC Board took the case under advisement.

Dance Costs Father $120

The 18-year-old daughter of Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.), danced at the President's Inaugural Ball Thursday night but to the tune of $120.

Representative Jacobs reported to police yesterday his daughter, Wanda Lee, had asked him during dinner to keep her billfold while she attended the ball with her escort from Indiana. He discovered later that night the pocketbook, containing $120, had disappeared. The girl was reimbursed by her father, police said.

Action on Hume School Site Awaits Topographical Study

The Arlington County school board may start condemnation action within a week on a site it favors for the proposed new Hume Elementary School, if a topographical survey proves favorable.

The 8-acre tract, center of a controversy between the school board, adjacent home owners and local civic groups, is located at S. 24th st. near Ode and Nast sts.

Arlington School Consultant E. J. Braun said yesterday the 10-day togopraphical survey of the 24th st. site will be completed "early this week."

Arlington's school board favors the 24th st. property. But adjacent home-owners have attacked the site's suitability, and the Arlington Ridge Civic Association criticized the selection as too expensive.

$475,000 Set Aside for Pier In 1950 Budget

The 1950 Federal budget submitted to Congress by President Truman includes $475,700 for completion of a Washington Channel pier and $2,700,000 for continued flood control and anti-pollution work in the Potomac River Basin of western Maryland.

The District appropriation, if approved by Congress, will be used to complete Pier No. 4, on Maine ave. at the foot of N st. sw., it was explained by R. L. Wadsworth, chief engineer of the rivers and harbors branch of the Army District Engineers.

A part of the 9-year program of waterfront improvement and beautification, the new pier will be used by the Wilson Line and Potomac Line excursion steamers.

Two separate projects are involved in the Potomac River Basin work, according to Frank Shore, assistant chief of the flood control branch of the Army District Engineers.

One, for which one million dollars was allowed in the 1950 fiscal year budget, would continue the the interior drainage project at Cumberland, Md., and Ridgeley, W. Va.

The other Maryland project would complete construction of a dam across the Savage River, part of the Potomac River Basin, four miles above Luke, Md.

HAVE YOU HEARD
The Story of the Man Who Just Sat?

The other day we were minding our Liquor Stock Exchange when a man walked in looking casual but curious. He studied the price board and a clerk approached him. "No, thanks," he said, "I'm just waiting."

He settled himself where he could watch the board. He sat there all day—watching and waiting—and left without purchase or comment.

Morning dawned, and he returned. Could we help him? No, he was just waiting . . . and he sat down again.

Well, we're used to characters, so we walked around him while he sat another day out. But we're also human, and that evening we asked him what was he waiting for.

"I've always heard about Pearson's low prices. Well, I have 18 cents, and I'm waiting 'til something drops to the price I can spend. . . !"

Yes, sir, it can happen here . . . and usually does!

3 Cases Unsolved

Murder Unit Disbanded As Leads Fail

A special investigations squad set up a year ago to concentrate on closing three of Washington's unsolved murders, has gradually been disbanded and the cases are still unsolved.

At the time of the squad's organization, police officials had announced they had a number of "leads" in the cases which needed concentrated work. The "leads" were never made public.

Yesterday, Inspector Robert S. Bryant said the men are still working on the cases and have information which cannot be disclosed at this time. But because of the heavy press of police work, police have had to use the men for work on other cases and the squad is no longer operating as a unit, he said. He pointed out that the men are sandwiching in work on the special cases between their work on daily cases.

Organized in 1948

The squad was organized January 18, 1948, and consisted of Lieut. Edgar E. Scott and Detective Sergts. Robert E. Talbot, Richard Meissner, Herbert C. Young and John L. Sullivan.

On April 1, Scott was transferred to head the robbery squad and was replaced by Lieut. John B. Layton. In recent months, Meissner has been transferred temporarily to the general management squad and Young to the robbery squad.

The cases the squad was to concentrate on were:

The death of James A. Kemp, 24, of 335 37th pl. se., a Navy Yard cabinet maker, who was fatally stabbed at 37th st. and 37th pl. se. September 1, 1946.

The fatal shooting of Mrs. Adele G. Johnson, 62-year-old landlady of 1728 New Hampshire ave. nw., who was killed in her basement apartment by a prowler September 18, 1947.

The death of Dorothy Belle Woods, 32, who was found garroted in an alley between G st. and the 1600 block of Marion st. nw. on December 17, 1947.

10 Indicted in Fake Divorce Evidence Ring

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Ten persons were indicted today on charges of taking part in a fake divorce evidence ring which allegedly staged phony bedroom scenes and gave false testimony in court.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan disclosed existence of the alleged ring last November after the arrest of two men and the 20-year-old mother of three children. Hogan said the young mother, Mrs. Sarah B. Ellis, admitted posing as the "unidentified woman" in bedroom scenes staged to produce adultery evidence.

Two attorneys and a law clerk were among those indicted.

2 Who Served Mrs. Patterson Questioned

Pre-trial deposition in the Patterson will case yesterday were taken from two women employed by the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson.

Mrs. Kay O. McCarter, of 3904 Ingomar st. nw., employed by Mrs. Patterson in 1943 as a personal secretary, was questioned for about two hours by attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson who is seeking to break her mother's will.

Questioned All Day

Mrs. Sibilla Campbell, executive housekeeper for Mrs. Patterson, submitted to an all-day questioning. The depositions were taken at the law offices of Roberts & McInnis, in the Transportation Buildings, with attorneys also present for executors named in the will.

Employed by Mrs. Patterson periodically since 1932, Mrs. Campbell is still living at the 15 Dupont Circle mansion of the late owner of the Washington Times-Herald, at the request of officials of Riggs Bank, court-appointed temporary collector for the multimillion-dollar Patterson estate.

Bequeathed $1000

In the contested will, Mrs. Campbell was bequeathed $1000. She was also named as executrix for the estate of the late Charles Bell Porter, former Times-Herald treasurer who plunged to his death September 14 from a Clarksburg, W. Va., hotel window, but Porter's will designating her was not witnessed and not valid here. Porter was once named as a major beneficiary of the Patterson will.

William A. Roberts said the next deposition on behalf of Mrs. Gizycka's challenge of the will is to be taken Wednestay from Miss Margaret Barney, Mrs. Patterson's personal secretary at the time of her death. Pretrial hearing of the will case is set for Friday, after being twice postponed.

Howard Hughes Backs Damon as TWA President

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (AP).—Howard Hughes announced tonight he is recommending Ralph Damon for the presidency of Trans-World Airlines. He said he is confident the firm's directors "will receive this suggestion with enthusiasm."

Hughes, chairman of the board and chief stockholder of TWA, will make his recommendation to a meeting of the board in Kansas City Tuesday. Damon resigned recently as president of American Airlines.

In a press release, Hughes declared "I found that, in addition to our long standing friendship, we shared a feeling against the so-called 'chosen instrument.'

"The 'chosen instrument' is the proposal fostered by certain individuals for the elimination of competition in overseas air transportation, and the creation in its place of one gigantic trust or monopoly. . . . I found that Damon and I saw eye to eye."

Court Upholds Tax Exemption For Reservist on Active Duty

A man on active service with the Coast Guard Reserve is entitled to the $1500 exemption of military pay for income tax purposes, even though his pay during such duty came from his civilian job with the Government, the United States Court of Appeals held yesterday.

The court thus reversed decisions by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Tax Court denying the $1500 exemption to William I. Connelly and his wife, Mrs. Bertha Connelly, of 531 W. Great Falls st., Falls Church, Va.

Connelly said last night there were about 450 Government employes who served on full-time active duty with the Coast Guard Reserve under the same status. He believed about 100 of these will benefit by the decision.

The income period involved in his case was 1943 and 1944, when Connelly, an attorney in the Office of the Solicitor of the Department of Commerce, was enrolled in the Coast Guard Reserve as a lieutenant commander. His duties were similar to those he performed as a civilian, and he continued to receive his civilian pay. He was not paid by the Coast Guard.

The majority opinion of the court, expressed by Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, said the similarity of duties in Connelly's civilian job and his military service cannot "erase the distinction between civilian and military service."

Judge Henry W. Edgerton dissented with an opinion that the petitioner's pay could not be said to have been received for active service as a commissioned officer.

Judge Bennett Champ Clark was the third member of the court which heard the case.

Check-Passing Suspect Held

check was drawn. The woman left the check and clothing she had ordered, police said.

Leland S. McCarthy, manager of the store, telephoned police, who also received a call from Beatrice Kahn, owner of the Beatrice Shop, reporting the purchase of a $14.95 sweater by the woman.

Scout Car 81, in which Pvts. R. J. Wrenn and E. L. York were driving Pvt. D. W. Moore to his beat in the vicinity, picked up the lookout broadcast over the police radio.

The woman, described as being about 30 years old and 5 feet, 3 inches tall, was arrested by Private Moore in a liquor store in the 2600 block Connecticut ave.

Other checks being studied by police include the following:

December 6, to Monty's Dress Shop, 1327 Connecticut ave. n., on the Lincoln National Bank, $62.30. Police said $40 was paid for a dress and the balance taken in cash.

December 18, to cash, on the Lincoln National Bank, for $75, passed at Sears-Roebuck & Co., 4500 Wisconsin ave. nw.

January 10, to cash, on the Hamilton National Bank, $35. Police said the check was accepted by Miss Charlotte Berman, owner of the Town Crier Gift Shop, 1514 Wisconsin ave. nw., for purchase of a $16.65 tray, with the balance taken in cash.

Also January 10, to cash, on the Hamilton National Bank, $60. Police said the check was paid to Leeds Liquor Store, 4201 Wisconsin ave., for two botles of whiskey costing $12, with the balance taken in cash.

Police said the woman, in writing checks for purchases, would present as identification, a driver's permit and AAA registration card reportedly stolen from a northwest Washington home last March. She would sign checks with the man's name as shown, preceded by "Mrs.," police said.

Md. Fight Underway On Mental Hospitals

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24—The most controversial issue to face the 1949 session of the Maryland Legislature, what to do about the State's mental institutions, erupted briefly tonight in the State Senate.

A brief but heated floor debate was started when Senator Daniel Ellison (R., Baltimore) introduced a resolution calling for "immediate" investigation by the Senate of alleged "disgraceful" conditions in the "overcrowded and under staffed" mental hospitals.

In his resolution, Senator Ellison proposed a five-member committee of senators be appointed to report within 10 days on the need for emergency appropriations to provide immediate relief.

When the resolution was read, Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges), the Senate majority leader, urged that the proposal be referred to an appropriate committee to prevent "too hasty action on such a momentous question."

Senator Ellison leaped to his feet and, referring indirectly to an already launched investigation by Governor Lane, declared: "If we are going to rely only on what the Governor says we will be only a rubber stamp—and many people of the State think we are a rubber stamp now."

The Senate finally, on motion of Senator T. Phoebus (R., Somerset), tabled the resolution until Wednesday.

Also tabled by the Senate until Wednesday was a bill providing $100,000 annually for the study of alcholism throughout the State.

If enacted, the bill would set up a nine-member unpaid commission on alcoholism, starting next June 1.

The commission would consist of a physician, a psychiatrist, a graduate of the Yale Summer School of Alcohol Studies, a member fo Alcoholics Anonymous, a jurist, a welfare official and three business or professional persons.

Clinics would be set up at the Johns Hopkins Hospital and the University of Maryland Hospital and in western Maryland and the Eastern Shore.

The scheduled passage of the measure was delayed when Senator Wilmer C. Carter (D., Baltimore) said he was unfamiliar with the bill's provisions.

Senator Roy Tasco Davis (R., Montgomery), in urging passage of the bill, said it was aimed at "taking care of the State's alcoholics just as we take care of those afflicted with tuberculosis."

"The State gets six million dollars each year in alcohol taxes and we can certainly spend $100,000 to help alcoholics," he said.

The State legislators, meanwhile, awaited Governor Lane's budget message to b delivered at a joint session Tuesday night.

Administration sources have indicated the budget will be "i.. the black."

Bills Introduced Today Included:

HB129—By Prince Georges delegation—To levy a special tax of 10 cents per $100 on assessed value of property in a part of the Second Precinct of the Nineteenth Election District of Prince Georges County, the proceeds of the tax to be paid to the Riverdale Heights Volunteer Fire Department. (Delegation.)

HB131—By Reeves—To exclude Montgomery County from provisions of a State law granting a defendant a stay, in certain cases, of judgments brought against him. (Delegation.)

HB136 — By Montgomery delegation — To eliminate discounts for early payment of taxes in Takoma Park and set up a new method for levying and collecting taxes in the town (Prince Georges and Montgomery delegations).

HB137—By Montgomery delegation—To repeal an unnecessary section of the Montgomery and Prince Georges County local laws relating to taxation in Takoma Park (Prince Georges and Montgomery delegations).

HB138—By Montgomery delegation—To authorize the City of Takoma Park tto set up storm water drainage districts within the city and assess taxes to cover the cost of storm drains (Prince Georges and Montgomery delegations).

HB139—By Montgomery delegation—To provide a method of electing a mayor and a seven-man council of Takoma Park (Prince Georges and Montgomery delegations).

HB140—By Montgomery delegation—To require the boards of elections supervisors of Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties to certify lists of registered voters within the city of Takoma Park (Prince Georges and Montgomery delegations).

Hearing Is Requested On Anti-Red Bills

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24 (AP).—The Progressive Party of Maryland asked today for a hearing on the legislature's anti-Communist bills, calling them "odious legislation."

Both houses have measures prepared by a commission headed by Frank Ober of Baltimore.

They would impose severe penalties on persons who knowingly belong to subversive organizations, decree the dissolution of such organizations, and require loyalty checks on all Maryland public employes.

2-Year Jail Term Urged As Divorce Grounds

Annapolis, Jan. 24 (Spl.).—A bill was introduced last night in the Maryland House of Delegates which would make it grounds for divorce if the husband is sentenced to at least two years in jail.

The measure, sponsored by Delegate William H. McGrath (D., Prince Georges), would allow an absolute divorce.

Present grounds for divorce in Maryland are impotence, adultery, separation for three years, desertion for 18 months, and for any cause which by State law would render a marriage null and void.

Jim Crow Repeal Passed On to House

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24 (AP).—The State Senate gently dumped repeal of Maryland's ancient Jim Crow law into the lap of the House of Delegates tonight.

What the House would do about getting rid of the old act was problematical. In other years it has refused to approve repeal.

There was not a word spoken in debate when the Jim Crow repeal came up. It was passed by the Senate with a 20-4 vote.

Takoma Park

Time Factor Thwarts Bill On City Rule

Insufficient time remains to prepare for the Maryland General Assembly a bill to provide city manager government for Takoma Park, Md., an advisory committee reported last night.

At a meeting of the Takoma Park City Council, Walter H. McClenon, chairma of the citizens' advisory committee which was preparing the bill, informed Mayor John C. Post and other councilmen that a final draft on the bill could not be completed before May.

McClenon recommended that the city seek legislation to include Takoma Park in a "home rule" bill introduced by State Senator Edward Storm for municipalities in Frederick and other counties in the State, provided several special provisions be set up for Takoma Park.

Mayor Post said he would confer with legislators in Annapolis today to discuss the "home rule" bill, and the council deferred action pending outcome of the mayor's findings.

Civic Group in Silver Spring Indorses School Referendum

The Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, Md., last night indorsed legislation for a local referendum, which may pave the way for an elected school board in Montgomery County.

The approval was voiced in an amended resolution which voided an earlier motion indorsing a school board appointed by the Montgomery County Council. The vote in favor of the amended motion was 17 to 4.

Already Proposed

Authorization of the referendum by the Maryland State Legislature has been proposed by the County Parent-Teacher Council and the Montgomery County Civic Federation. The Montgomery County school board is now appointed by the Governor.

The Civic Group last night also indorsed a State school aid program to provide an additional 169 million dollars for construction. The program is before the State Legislature.

Action on U. S. Workers

The Allied Civic Group is composed of representatives of 20 citizens' organizations in the Silver Spring area. In another action last night, the group asked that Federal employes in Montgomery County be exempted from restrictive provisions of the Hatch Act.

Ralph D. Boyd, a past president of the Civic Group, declared the county is deprived of the services of some of its most outstanding citizens simply because they are Federal employes.

Boyd said he thought Montgomery had a better chance of getting an exemption from the Civil Service Commission now that the county has adopted a charter form of government, eliminating "machine" politics.

D. C. Letter Sent Negro in Cross-Burning

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—J. W. Sweat, a Negro teacher, whose home in a white neighborhood was the scene of a cross-burning here last week, reported to police today he received two anonymous letters, containing a pistol bullet and clippings of Ku Klux Klan activities. One letter was mailed here, the other in Washington.

Police said the Washington letter contained a plain slip of paper with the words "you are not smart" lettered on it. There also was a clipping of a KKK initiation, and a clipping, ostensibly from a Washington newspaper giving an account of cross burnings in Virginia in recent years.

Sweat and his family recently moved into their North Richmond home. They are the only Negroes in the 2700 block of Barton Avenue.

Musical Fares

Few Capital Transit patrons realized, when the new 13-cent fare went into effect, that they soon would be treated to the transplanted atmosphere of a tea dance. Streetcar and bus riders, so the announcements say, are now to be lulled by the strains of "soft melodic music" from special FM radios as they jostle for seats. What the announcements do not stress is that the musical venture is strictly a business proposition and that its importance to Capital Transit has a revenue aspect. It is the commercials that make the programs possible.

Any way you look at it, this prospect amounts to an imposition on the rider's privacy. The person who pays his fare on the assumption that it entitles him to silence has no recourse. The ordinary radio listener can flip a button when there is a distasteful program or commercial. The newspaper reader can skip any advertisements he dislikes. Even the barber shop patron can request a haircut without benefit of dialogue. But the commuter is left no choice; he can either listen to the drone of the loudspeakers—or walk.

Some of the curse is removed, to be sure, by restrictions on the type of program to be offered. Capital Transit promises no jumping jive and no heavy symphonies, but light and soothing music. Commercials will be limited to no more than one every five minutes, and presumably there will be none of the variety that drags customers out of their seats. There are to be no blaring loudspeakers, but merely enough volume to provide a harmonious background—directed, incidentally, away from vehicle operators. But all these points are merely mitigating circumstances.

The possibilities of more revenue being what they are, it is somewhat less than likely that this violated privacy will make much difference. Transit radios in other cities are proving lucrative devices which apparently do not entail too much customer complaint. But if Capital Transit is to subject a million riders a day to music and advertising blandishments over which they have no control, then certainly the company has a responsibility both to police the type of program offered and to return to the public, either in better service or lower fares, the benefits of increased revenue. Furthermore, the company ought to consider seriously the furnishing of earmuffs to riders who do not hold with the Capital Transit theory that it is not silence, but the lack of it, that is golden.

Israeli Elections

The elections today in Israel are generally expected to reveal no extraordinary change in the relative strengths of the various parties. Hard and fast predictions, however, cannot be made, among other reasons because the newer immigrants from Europe have not yet had an opportunity to voice their political allegiances. Barring upsets, however, Israel will probably continue to develop as a democratic socialist state with a predominantly Western orientation.

The balloting itself is both a demonstration and a test of this orientation. The provisional government is less than one year old and throughout its life has faced the enmity of its neighbors. Only a strong devotion to the forms and substances of democratic government could support the holding of elections at a moment of crisis such as Israel now faces. As much as the success of Israeli arms in fending off Arab invasion, this, it seems to us, attests the quick attainment by the new state of political maturity and stability. There can be little excuse hereafter for either the United States or Great Britain to withhold de jure recognition.

Most attention will doubtless be paid to the electoral strength of the extremist parties. The Revisionists of Menahem Beigin on the right and the Communists on the left could make dangerous inroads on the strength of the center parties, the more so since the voting is under the proportional representation system. The extremists have in common their bitter hostility toward the British—and, by transference, toward the United States. But it seems unlikely that they could gain enough votes to bring a material swing toward Russia in Israeli foreign policy. The Soviet's most recent detour in its policy toward Zionism, evident in the closing down of Jewish emigration from Romania, Czechoslovakia and Poland, ought to work against this, since large-scale immigration is a cornerstone of Israeli hope for the future.

These who are elected today in Israel will have the double task of debating and adopting a constitution, for which a draft has already been elaborated, and of acting in the meantime as the state's legislative body. It is a heavy responsibility, undertaken in circumstances not conducive to purely rational deliberation. However, Israel has shown unexpected ability already to operate under adversity, and this election is more likely than not to bring added confirmation that the new state is here to stay.

Communist Professors

Reverberations from the dismissal of three professors from the faculty of the University of Washington are certain to be widespread. On the one hand, the whole educational world will want to know whether academic freedom has been infringed. On the other hand, Communists in this country and abroad may be expected to distort and exploit the incident for propaganda purposes. It is especially important, therefore, that fair-minded American citizens view the incident without bias and with a clear understanding of the principles involved.

Two of the dismissed professors, Herbert J. Phillips and Joseph Butterworth, both of whom admitted membership in the Communist Party, have appealed to the American Association of University Professors, alleging gross infringement of civil rights and academic freedom. The civil rights issue is easily disposed of. No one has a "right" to be a professor in a State university any more than he has a right to be Secretary of Labor or a State road commissioner. Every American has the right to believe whatever he chooses plus the right of free speech, and of course the dismissed professors continue to enjoy these rights. They have not been thrown into jail or sent to a desolate work camp, as they would have been for teaching democratic principles in Russia.

The real question which the board of regents had to decide is whether the professors accused of Communist affiliations are fit persons to teach in a State university. All the indications point to thoughtful and restrained consideration of that issue. The original investigation was made by a legislative committee, but trustworthy reports from Seattle say there was no witch-hunting. Ten of the 700 full-time members of the faculty were named as being or having been Communists. Six of these cases were submitted to the faculty Committee on Tenure and Academic Freedom, which examined them with the utmost fairness and recommended that only Associate Professor Ralph Gundlach, who refused to admit that he was a Communist, be fired. The board of regents again reviewed all the findings and concluded, on the recommendations of President Raymond B. Allen, that the two assistant professors who had confessed to secret Communist Party membership should also go. The three who admitted being Communists in the past and denied present membership were permitted to remain on probation.

Everyone who had anything to do with these cases seems to agree that academic freedom must be maintained. The disagreements arise over what academic freedom is. Apparently some interpret it to mean that once a person attains "tenure" on a university faculty he must be allowed to continue teaching regardless of what he does or teaches. We do not think such a broad definition is admissible. If a professor should prove to be an agent of the Nazis or a spokesman for the Ku Klux Klan, for example, he would have no place on a faculty devoted to the honest pursuit and teaching of the truth.

"Academic freedom consists of something more than merely an absence of restraints placed upon the teacher by the institution that employs him," said President Allen. "It demands as well an absence of restraints placed upon him by his political affiliations, by dogmas that may stand in the way of a free search for truth, or by rigid adherence to a 'party line' that sacrifices dignity, honor, and integrity to the accomplishment of political ends." In short, academic freedom implies that the teacher must be free, and no Communist, if he is faithful to his commitments, is free. He is committed to the views dictated by the party hierarchy and to whatever action may be required of him by the same hierarchy, even to the point of force and violence.

We do not see how straight-thinking, free citizens can escape the conclusion that men so committed by secret party affiliations are unfit to teach in a State university. A newspaper attempting impartially to serve the public in a democratic country could not consistently employ Communists in its news or editorial departments. There is even less justification for a State university supported by tax funds to employ sworn enemies of our free institutions, men who show by their actions assent to deception, force and violence, as teachers of the youth to whom the future of our country belongs.

Cocktail Hour

One of the first lessons every congressional newcomer to Washington learns is that the social life of this town will get him if he don't watch out. The freshman Senator from Illinois, Paul H. Douglas, seems to be the first of the new batch in Congress to make the perennial discovery that the cocktail, as poured out by Washington hosts and hostesses, is a strong competitor for the time and energy he might be investing in the public business. Two years ago Representative Fred Bradley of Michigan voiced much the same complaint. The Capital's constant round of parties was running him ragged, to the injury of his work—and apparently also of his health, since he died very shortly afterward.

We don't mean by recalling Representative Bradley's fate to throw a scare into Senator Douglas and his neophyte colleagues. A glance around will show that many of the older members of Congress have survived the ordeal by firewater, some of them with evident pleasure. But the choice is always there for each new solon to make; whether to take the cocktails and let the legislation go, adopt the contrary practice, or find a happy medium.

When we commented before on this particular problem, Mr. Andrei Gromyko was at the height of his veto-wielding career, and we suggested that members of Congress could take a tip from him by saying "no" to all but the minimum of invitations. This still seems to us a good rule of thumbs-down. Most congressmen and practically all of their constituents think a legislator's place is at his desk. The contrary theory, strongly held by Washington social leaders, is that public figures come or are sent here primarily to serve as pawns in the local game of social prestige.

Which has the prior claim to a congressman's time, the constituents or the cocktails, is for each new member to decide for himself. We'll lay our money on the constituents, however. They have the last word and they can speak it loud enough to be heard over the hubbub of any number of cocktail parties.

Peace Offensive

The shrill effort of French and Italian Communist leaders to persuade the President to send a "peace mission" to Moscow is not likely to be acceptable to the White House. Both the President and Secretary Acheson have shown that they intend to guide America's world policy from Washington. If Stalin or some other high dignitary in Moscow cares to come to Washington, no doubt he will be welcome, but the visits of special American representatives to Moscow have hitherto proved barren of result and weapons only for Soviet propagandists. The last occasion was nearly 12 months ago when Secretary Marshall sent Ambassador Bedell Smith specially to the Kremlin with the specific assurance of America's peaceful intentions. The Kremlin asked the Ambassador to put the assurance in written form, whereupon a bowdlerized version was broadcast all over the world, the transparent purpose being to help Mr. Wallace's candidature. It is unlikely that a special visit will be repeated except as the prelude to particular action in case of failure to agree on a particular problem.

The President dissipated all question about his peaceful intentions in his inaugural. Some writers have objected that the speech was too anti-Communist, but the President, in our opinion, steered a shrewd course between a tirade and an effusion. The exposition of the free way of life had to be put in the framework of the slave way of life because the battle has been joined. It would have reduced the speech to an idle flourish to have ignored the basic fact of conflict in today's world. The difficulty was to recognize that fact and at the same time avoid being inflammatory. This the President accomplished, and the result was a piece of constructive propaganda without equal in recent years. Nothing in the inaugural would encourage those commiphobes who want the United States to indulge in a sort of trench warfare with the Soviet Union, to be content with a crusade instead of a policy. Several opportunities for diplomatic action are available—opportunities for resolving the snarls in Austria, in Berlin, and on the Greek border. It is the pursuit of these opportunities, as well as of a policy of world reconstruction, that Mr. Truman seems bent upon, and it should be encouraged by the latest twist in Communist tactics shown by Messrs. Togliatti and Cachin.

Pension Costs

Some of the Government's labor experts are said to favor the establishment of an agency, possibly within the Department of Labor, to analyze various pension proposals, try to determine their cost, and advise employers and employes how to adjust their demands to the capacity of industry to pay. Such studies are badly needed, as shown by the conflicting opinions regarding the cost of the Lewis pension plan, and guesses as to the probable cost of the $100 a month pensions that Walter Reuther is demanding.

Costs depend upon a multitude of factors, such as the age composition of the group to be covered, the character and size of benefits, etc. The inclusion in pension plans of various welfare items also complicates the problem of cost analysis. Armed with basic information as to the present costs and, more important, the future commitments entailed by pension plans, industry and labor would, it is believed, be able to reach agreements on pension plans that would be safer and more reasonable. At least they would not be agreements based on ignorance of the extent of the obligations assumed.

While The Washington Post is opposed to compulsory negotiation of pension demands and believes that extension of the Government system of social insurance will be hampered if favored unions succeed in obtaining generous pension benefits from private employers, there is room for voluntary extension of such private systems. Moreover, as matters stand, unions can demand that employers include pension demands in collective bargaining. Under such conditions there is urgent need for impartial outside determination of the cost of meeting such demands.

HEAVEN

I am no more rapt scholar of the moon
Or ostentatious comet in its flight
Through the tremendous arches of the night
To the dark place where all the stars lie strewn . . .
They, too, are moths; fixed in no fairer plan
Than this that puts the green leaves on the bough
Of every tree that with its shape of shadow
A blue tree makes for grazing sheep and cow.
Enough, the rosewood oxen on the near
Green heights of timothy, the mare and colt
That run for joy to feel the wind
Against the velvet side and eye—
The meadow brook that pauses here in gold
To tumble silver where the pebbles lie—
The mystery of boughs where squirrels sit,
The green rooms full of the blackbird's wit!

Single Chief Of Staff

With reference to the interesting letter by R. P. M. published in your January 17 issue, there are three points mentioned that I consider worthy of careful study by everyone interested in the single Chief of Staff discussion.

First, he implies—rather broadly—that history may account our Joint Chiefs of Staff to be a transitory wartime venture which, in the interest of efficiency, should be supplanted by a single military executive. This may well be, but more to the point, I feel, would be an examination of the degree of success achieved by those nations who actually have employed a single Chief of Staff in the past.

Every one of our major enemies in the recent war—and in the one which preceded it—were single Chief of Staff advocates—and we defeated them all. Among these defeated nations, however, there was one point of uniformity. In every case, the single military commander system resulted in an elevation of the military into political and economic areas where the military does not belong.

Second, R. P. M. likens our defense machinery to an industrial enterprise. Let him be assured that no such parallel exists in fact. An industrial enterprise is conducted for the purpose of making a profit for those directly and financially interested in it. Our national military establishment is not a profit-making undertaking. Its interests and obligations are external. It is a servant of the United States—and nothing more.

Finally, he lays vigorous and praiseworthy emphasis on the necessity for economy; proposing that through a military system which concentrates its direction in a single individual we can increase the economic efficiency of our military system. With this I must take vigorous issue.

Competition unquestionably is the life of trade and a modest amount of competition within the military is both useful and desirable. However, by the inordinate concentration of all directive power in the hands of a single military executive and the resultant stifling of laudable though divergent views, we bid fair to abridge rather than enhance our chances at a more economical military structure.

"Budgets As Literature"

Commendation upon bringing a "new look" to the editorial page in The Washington Post of January 17. The editorial on "Budgets as Literature" is intriguing and diverting. The subject, of course, is not as romantic as the themes of Longfellow's poems; yet, who knows the potentialities of some of the congressional poets? Or, of your editorial staff?

Why not continue the divertissement by similarly publishing other sections of the budget? It may be a means of bringing it more forcefully to the attention of your readers—who should read it. But a forbidding thought: some member of Congress might set the stanzas to music—perhaps, the "Budget Waltz"—and might even use sections of it on his stump during the next campaign!

A. T. & T. Suit

Commenting on the current accusations that the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is a monopoly, I would like to point out that there are some 6000 telephone companies in the United States, a fact not known by many. That many of these companies use manufactured equipment made by companies other than Western Electric Co., the manufacturing branch of the A. T. & T., is also a very little known fact.

That the A. T. & T. became larger than any of these companies has been due to its constant endeavor to give better service to the public, and it does. I know this is true, because I worked as a lineman, repairman and installer for several telephone companies besides A. T. & T.

I have been distressed at the recent disrupting proposal to split the Western Electric Co., which in the long run would only increase the cost of improved telephone service to the public. In my opinion the success of the A. T. & T. is definite proof of how competition in a free enterprise system of economics works toward the betterment of service to all.

"Unfinished Tour"

I have been intensely interested in reading your editorial of January 23, "Unfinished Tour," and most emphatically indorse your proposal for a continuation of the Freedom Train tour under Government auspices if Congress makes it possible.

I have taken my friends through the train several times and always with their delight at receiving what you so well term "citizenship education." I shall certainly urge my congresional Representatives to support the "bipartisan resolutions" in both houses of Congress.

If these resolutions result in definite Government control and operation of the train I should like to suggest that for the children who visit the train there be provided what I may term "freedom instructors," who should carefully explain the great significance of the wonderful old historic documents. In the hustle and bustle of the crowds which often hurried through the train, the little folk were often neglected and so did not get much of value.

I believe that even many of the older folks in their hurry, did not get a full realization of the meaning of the wonderful documents as they relate to our civilization today.

Thoughts On The Inauguration

The other day when Mr. Truman made the remark that there were more than a million men in this country who could do the job as well or better than he, I stopped to wonder if this statement were really true. We realize that there are more than a million people that would make an excellent President, but we must admit that there is only one Harry Truman.

I feel that Mr. Truman is as much a hero, or "a man of the hour" as any President that we have had. The college of experience and hardships has caused this man to receive his magna cum laude degree as one of its most liberal, aggressive and respected citizens. Life for Mr. Truman has not been easy. He has tasted most of the bitters of every average American citizen. However, with his early rearing, a determination of steel, an indomitable courage, his liberal philosophy and his unlimited trust in God, he has made his lessons mean a definite and fundamental goal in his life's work. The results of these experiences of Mr. Truman have forced all of us to have intimate confidence in him as a most sincere man.

LEONARD R. BROWN.
Washington.

As I listened to President Truman's inaugural address, and the applause of Washington's leaders seated around him, I felt sorry for the human race. I am a man of only average intelligence, unqualified to discuss the intricate problems of statecraft, but of a few simple truths I am absolutely certain.

One is this: You are not a good citizen of your community if you stand on your front porch and proudly boast about the virtues of your family, while denouncing the faults of your neighbors down the street.

Another is this: You cannot make peace by indulging in threats and intimidation any more than you can gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles. Peacemaking is by nature a healing process and not one of nettling and irritation.

If Mr. Truman were as wise as he appears to be sincere in seeking peace, he would at once dismiss many of the men with whom he has surrounded himself, who are experts in war-making, and seek the counsel of men who are experts in human relations.

J. STUART INNERST,
Santa Ana, Calif.

It is extremely unfortunate that a man in President Truman's position should stoop to such infantile practices as snubbing his former opponent for the Presidency and the men who hold opposing views on some of his recommendations.

Being from a long line of Democrats and having voted Democratic in the last election, it is with deepest regret I come to the conclusion Mr. Truman is not the caliber man for the position of Chief Executive of the mightiest nation on earth. His action was entirely uncalled for, and apologies to the recipients should be in order.

I am sure that parade watchers like myself who stood on Constitution ave. along the curb across from Eighth st., wish to thank the inauguration committee. It was very evident that a great deal of planning and work must have been done to insure the success of the parade. We enjoyed the public-address system very much. During the long wait before the parade the music entertained and helped to pass away the time. Later we were able to hear every word as our President and Vice President took their oaths of office. This ceremony was very impressive. I especially appreciated the President's simple "thank you" which came over the air through the applause after this ceremony — apparently an automatic response to some courtesy. It seemed to be to show that our President is innately considerate of others.

Considering the length of the parade and the temperature, I fail to see how it was brisk and not cold. I stood on the north side of the Capitol, and by 4 o'clock I and the people around me were cold.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

World Bank's Role

ONE OF THE ABLEST men in public life anywhere is John J. McCloy, chairman of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Forthright and outgiving far more than most officials, McCloy has lately been speaking his mind about the role of the bank, which is an agency of the United Nations, and also about the role of Uncle Sam as lender to the world.

In a lengthy conversation some time ago McCloy expressed his ideas to President Truman. Out of that talk may well have come the concept for the much-discussed point No. 4 in the inaugural address, proposing that American capital and American technology combine on a new basis of investment abroad to develop untapped natural resources.

McCloy has long been dubious of the loan phase of the European aid program. He believes the loans are unrealistic in terms of possible repayment. And, furthermore, they handicap the effort to bring about coordination of the European economy.

To illustrate his conviction that the lender is bound to be disliked, McCloy tells a story about the elder J. P. Morgan. A friend told Morgan that a certain industrialist hated him intensely.

"Why," said Morgan, "how can that be? I never loaned him any money."

AT THE same time McCloy has made no secret of his concern for the status of the World Bank. As with other phases of the United Nations which began with bright hopes, events during the past two years have cut across the function of the bank.

It was intended to make constructive loans, sound from the point of view of eventual repayment but at interest rates lower than a private bank would fix, to develop retarded and colonial areas of the earth. Power and irrigation projects, mining and timber development were to be submitted as the basis for loans from the bank's funds.

In actual fact, in spite of having the ablest direction from its inception, the bank has been little used. The European aid program dominates western Europe, where the greatest opportunity existed for the kind of lending the World Bank was designed to do. While the need is great in the Middle East, the strife and chaos there have made lending seem too hazardous.

In eastern Europe the fact of the cold war has deterred the bank from making what would otherwise be constructive and useful loans. Under consideration for a long time is an extensive project to exploit the timber resources of eastern European countries under a bank loan.

So quiet is the backwater in which the bank has found itself that McCloy's friends and admirers have hinted that it was time for him to put his great talents to more immediate and practical use. They felt that he was too valuable to be in a position that had begun to look like a deadend.

THIS IS NOT to say that the bank is doing nothing. A mission from the bank is now on the way to India to inspect a whole series of projects for which the Indian government is seeking loans.

The railroads of India need rehabilitation and reorganization. This alone would cost upward of 150 million dollars. The government has a series of projects in connection with a far-reaching agriculture program that is designed to make India self-sufficient in food supply within a relatively short time.

India is a perfect example of how technology and capital can be employed to transform living standards. With the prospect that political and religious differences can be resolved, both India and Pakistan are hopeful of moving into the age of modern technology.

The World Bank would seem to be the ideal instrument to underwrite this advance. It should be the focus of the whole program that the President talked about in his point No. 4. Soviet Russia is not a member of the World Bank, therefore the veto does not operate.

This country cannot escape its share of responsibility for the present impotence of the United Nations. Bowing before the symbol of the U. N., we proceed to by-pass it. However much this may seem to have been dictated by the obstacles of the veto and Russian aggression, the facts cannot be denied and it is time we faced them.

Here in the President's proposal and in the World Bank there is a chance to demonstrate that this country does not intend to usurp the U. N. role. Realism and idealism are not always in conflict.

Transit Radios

I would like to know what legal right the Capital Transit Co. has to foist upon its riders a radio program. We, the riders, pay for transportation, and the charter under which the traction companies operate does not give them the right to assail their passengers with advertised commercials, jingles, and music of somebody else's choosing, while traveling to or from work.

The bus driver, well occupied with driving a large bus through rush hour downtown traffic, watching lights, selling tokens and passes, making change, giving directions and maintaining a schedule, will not be aided in his nerve-racking job by being forced to listen to the advantages of a certain undertaker's 49 extra services.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Panorama

MR. ACHESON, as General Marshall's successor, takes over many intricate and dangerous problems. But he inherits also the benefit of decisions which only Marshall could have made convincing and acceptable to this country in the postwar era. They are the most fundamental of all decisions—in that they have defined the vital interests of the Western Hemisphere in its relation to the Eastern Hemisphere.

Lippmann

The first of his great decisions was reached after a year of intensive inquiry in the midst of the Chinese civil war. It was that while this country might be able to influence somewhat, it could not direct and control, the immense human unheaval in Asia, of which the Chinese civil war is only an aspect. It followed, therefore, that the true American policy was not to become involved deeply and irrevocably as a partisan in a struggle of which no man can foresee the outcome,—and by not becoming involved, to keep open the door between the new nations of Asia and the older nations of the West.

The second of the great decisions will always be associated with Marshall's name. It was that Europe and the Americas are united, not divided as Americans once thought, by the Atlantic Ocean and its connections in the North Sea and the Mediterranean. Here we are involved by geography, by history, by economic and strategic interest, by our institutions and our culture, and by the religious and moral tradition of which Europe and the Americas are the bearers.

THE relations between this Atlantic community and the world beyond it—that is to say the Soviet Union on the one hand, and the new nations of Asia on the other—are the central issues of our age. They are misconceived when we reduce them all to the idea that the issue is exclusively whether mankind is to be ruled from Moscow or led by Washington. We are in the presence of history, and of movements among the nations, races, and tribes of humanity that no one government, however powerful, can control—and no ideology, however pretentious and presumptuous, can define.

Our responsibilities, as Marshall, defined them, are enormous. But they are not universal, and if, having emerged so recently and so suddenly from our own isolation, we allow ourselves to imagine that we can shape the destiny of the globe, we shall not do what we can and must do because we try to do so many things that it is impossible to do.

THE THING we can and must do is to consolidate the Atlantic community. This will not have been accomplished until the partition of Europe is ended, and the eastern European countries are allowed to re-enter the European commonwealth to which they belong.

AMONG the things that it is impossible to do is to restore, or even to maintain, the relations between the West and the people of Asia which have existed for the past 200 years. That epoch, which began with the British conquest of India in the Eighteenth Century, is in its last decline.

The end has been honorable and hopeful when Western governments have recognized soon enough that Western empire in Asia must be liquidated—as we did in the Philippines, as Mr. Attlee did in India. The end has been squalid when the Western governments have clung to the past and have resisted the realities of the present—as in Indonesia, as in Indo-China, as in Mr. Bevin's adventures with the Arab League. In the case of China, the end has been tragic, especially for those who would not look at and deal with what was happening in China because they were so spellbound by what they believed was happening in Moscow.

THE DECLINE of Western power in Asia is so great an historical event that for some time to come it will not be possible for any Western government to have a policy about Asia. That is to say, it will not be possible to have clearly defined objectives and a program for attaining them. For the essence of the matter is that the Asiatic world is now outside the reach of the military power, the economic control, and the ideological influence, of the Western world. Our diplomatic relations and our intercourse with it will have to be developed slowly, tentatively, and modestly, and we shall need for our guidance in this new era not so much a policy as a philosophy.

There are many who think that Western power in Asia will be replaced promptly and inevitably by the Soviet power. They may be right. But those who hold this view may be as wrong in their pessimism today as they were not so long ago in their optimistic notion that at the end of the war Asia would, with some change of the outward formalities, return to the status quo ante. There is, therefore, some ground for hope that Asia which has become unmanageable by western Europe will prove to be unmanageable by Russia.

After all, when the Roman Empire broke up, it had no immediate successor.

He Gets Around

Psst! Rumor Says Truman Really Twins

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Staff Writer

This rumor-filled town has a new rumor today.

I know, because I have just invented it, whispered it to a waiter, and shoved it on its way by telling him not to tell anybody. It should be all over town in two days. Here 'tis:

There are two President Trumans.

Everyone has heard those stories that there really are three Joe Stalins. And that there were several Hitlers.

How much easier to believe there are two Harry S. Truman's!

Four days have passed since the Inauguration. Yet here I am, still drooping over my typewriter, frazzled out, pooped.

All In a Day

And what did Mr. Truman do today?

He talked with the Ambassador to Cuba, the Ambassador to England. He talked with John A. Kennedy, editor of the San Diego Journal. He talked with a Colgate University study group, and with Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.).

He talked with his Assistant Secretary of Labor, his budget director, and with his new Secretary of State, Dean Acheson.

If Mr. Truman was frazzled, worn out or pooped, nobody mentioned it.

With Owls, Chickens

Yet he has survived a week in which he went to bed with the owls and got up with the chickens. He put in one 20-hour day after another, much of the time while standing.

Obviously there are two Mr. Trumans. For, at 64, he's the oldest President to be inaugurated in 90 years. Obviously at that age no single Mr. Truman could do what the two Mr. Trumans have done.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll rush away and correct that rumor.

Not two Harry S. Trumans, boy. Make it three.

Vice President Looks Around For More Jobs

Vice President Alben W. Barkley stepped up to the Senate rostrum yesterday, tried the presiding officer's chair for size, and promptly started looking around for more work.

The 71-year-old Kentuckian, who wants to be a working vice president, volunteered for any sort of extra service the President or Congress wants him to do.

He made a little speech pointing out that the Constitution assigns him only one duty—presiding over the United States Senate.

Said Barkley:

"If at any time I may be of service to the Congress, to the Administration of course, to the Government and to the people, beyond the mere technical duties of presiding over the Senate, I shall be happy to be available . . ."

Mr. Truman has already told Barkley he wants him to sit in on Cabinet meetings. He may attend the weekly White House legislative conferences as well and generally help improve liaison with the Capitol.

Whether the President will find an extra "job" for him remained to be seen. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey promised to find Gov. Earl Warren a real job to do before the Californian agreed to run as Vice President.

Barred from Debate

Addressing the Senate, Barkley recalled that when the late Vice-President Thomas Marshall took the Senate rostrum in 1913 he announced he was "entering upon four years of silence."

Barkley said he couldn't make the same promise "because I shall probably have to adjust myself gradually to the fact that I am not a member of the Senate."

While the vice-president presides over the Senate, he cannot vote except in case of a tie nor can he participate in debate.

"It might not surprise the Senate if some day I should thoughtlessly walk down from the rostrum and begin to debate some problem," Barkley said, adding:

"I would expect to be called promptly to order."

Invites Cooperation

He told his former colleagues he "will be hanging around for four years" and would "invite the cooperation and the sympathetic good will of every member of this body, regardless of politics."

Then he did what he could to make the Senate rules work. As a starter he told the Senate he intended to enforce the rule against Senators making speeches or getting recognition out of order during the "morning hour"—a period reserved for the transaction of routine business. If Senators follow the regular order, he said, it would make for more "dispatch and promptness" in handling morning business.

Contest With Russia

By Sumner Welles

What The New Administration Faces

DURING the past month I have been unable for the first time in 16 years to follow the daily fluctuations in the world scene. The salient realities that our new Administration confronts seem, however, to stand out in sharp relief.

There is no indication of any abatement in the intensity of our contest with the Soviet Union. The efforts of Cachin and Togliatti and other leading Communists in western Europe to soften up the democracies for a new Soviet peace offensive have carried no conviction. There is not the slightest sign that the Kremlin intends to modify its policies of aggressive expansion or to abandon its attempt to foment world revolution.

The tempo of the Communist campaign in Europe has undoubtedly slowed up. To no small extent this is due to the Berlin air lift and to the relative success of ERP.

But in the Far East and in the Near East Communist activity has been greatly accelerated. China today seems nearer alien domination than at any previous moment in modern history. If a Communist - controlled regime can now be imposed upon the Chinese people the rise of nationalism in the rest of Asia will be in the Soviet pattern. In the long run the West could confront no graver menace than the regimentation of Asia's hundreds of millions of men and women and the utilization of her immense natural resources to further the Kremlin's objectives.

DURING the last four weeks the position of the democracies has in other ways grown materially stronger. There has been progress in preparing for the conclusion of a North Atlantic security alliance. The understanding reached by Britain and France lessens the likelihood that the "all-out for Germany" influences that have been deciding American policy will have their way. There is a clearer understanding in Washington that we can expect no real European recovery until the French fears of a rearmed and industrialized Germany have been finally dispelled.

The five-year trade accord signed 10 days ago by Great Britain and Poland emphasizes the Soviet government's failure to isolate its satellites from western Europe. It shows that the eastern European countries will not indefinitely deprive themselves of the means for recovery or willingly submit to the lower living standards that the Soviet economic program seeks to impose upon them.

Yet the benefits that the West should derive from such advantages are threatened by two impending dangers.

The first of these is the possibility that the American Congress will fail to adopt the rearmament program that is imperatively needed under existing world conditions and that it will fail to convince the European democracies that the United States is irrevocably committed to their support in the event of Soviet aggression.

The other danger is that Britain's Palestine policy will continue to be the Bevin policy. Mr. Bevin's policy has been accurately analyzed by one of his British critics as a policy that has caused Britain to be bitterly hated by the Jews; to be suspected by the Arabs; to lose American cooperation, and to be outmaneuvered by the Russians.

But from the larger viewpoint it has been still more disastrous. It has gravely weakened the authority of the United Nations. It has undeniably undermined Anglo - American understanding at a moment when wholehearted collaboration is indispensable. Unless it is discarded it will open the Middle East to those very Communist inroads that it was supposedly intended to prevent.

THE CHANGES in the Department of State provide the assurance that there will be closer teamwork between the White House and the State Department in the conduct of foreign policy, and that the spokesmen for the armed services on the National Security Council will no longer decide what that policy is to be.

In addition to his personal knowledge and experience, Mr. Acheson has these outstanding qualifications: He has vision. He has the courage of his convictions. He is capable of constructive initiatives. What is quite as important, he knows that initiatives are valueless unless they are implemented. It is unlikely that he will permit other agencies longer to infringe upon the State Department's rightful authority. It is equally improbable that General Clay and his counterpart in the Pentagon, General Draper, will continue to mold our Germany policy. It is still more unlikely that the tenuous fabric of international understanding will continue periodically to be torn apart by the ululations in Berlin of the aptly named Colonel Howley.

THERE IS NO REASON for unrelieved pessimism. Neither is there any cause for optimism.

War seems less likely than it did a year ago. But there is certainly no reason to think that there is any present sign that we can avoid a long-drawn-out contest of strength with the Soviet Union. As David Lilienthal has warned us, we are not going to get security by relying upon the atom bomb. The only hope for security lies in the willingness of a united American people to support a policy of Soviet containment as well as a more affirmative policy of democratic reconstruction such as that recommended in President Truman's inaugural message.

This means protracted patience, unflinching determination, continuing sacrifice and superior strength until the Soviet dictatorship has learned that the Western World is not going to collapse and that the peoples of the Western democracies can neither be bluffed, browbeaten nor defeated.

Pricing Method Bill Debated By Sawyer and FTC Member

The Commerce Department and the Federal Trade Commission disagreed yesterday over whether Congress needs to tell businessmen how they may legally price their products.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer generally indorsed a bill by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.). It would make it clearly legal for industry to equalize freight costs and delivered prices where no conspiracy exists.

Ewin L. Davis, Trade Commission member, said the bill is "neither necessary nor desirable."

Both he and Sawyer testified before a Senate Commerce subcommittee on trade policies which Johnson heads.

Johnson accused the FTC of issuing what he termed contradictory statements on the pricing methods business may legally use. He said they "stirred up unrest and uneasiness, and only made the situation worse."

The confusion stems from a Supreme Court decision handed down last April in the American Cement Institute case. The court, in upholding commission contentions that cement prices were set through conspiracy, outlawed the industry's multiple point basing system. The basing point is one of several methods used in business to equalize freight costs and set uniform delivered prices.

Johnson's bill would amend the antitrust laws to establish the legality of freight equalization and uniform pricing where no conspiracy exists. It would also define price to be what the buyer and seller agree upon.

$25,000 in Red Cross Aid Sent Snow Areas

The American Red Cross announced yesterday it has provided more than $25,000 worth of emergency food and fuel for snowbound families in isolated sections of the West in the past two weeks.

Wholesale Prices Show New 0.7 Pct. Drop

By The Associated Press

Wholesale prices dropped another 0.7 per cent during the week ended January 18, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

The index was recorded at 159.3 per cent of the 1926 average—2 per cent lower than a month ago and 4.3 per cent below the comparable week in 1948.

Farm products and food prices were lower, declining 2.4 and 1.5 per cent, respectively, as a result of lower prices on live stock meat and grain.

Cottonseed oil was under 17 cents a pound for the first time since August, 1947.

Lafayette's Williamson Named Wisconsin Coach

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE MAZDA madness of the late thirties when the major league club owners had only scorn for Larry MacPhail's introduction of night baseball, now is striking the same people as great good sense. They are seeing the light to the extent they are writing more night games onto the schedule than ever before, with the National League booking the record number of 179 for the coming season.

POVICH

It was supposed to be a passing fad like the horseless carriage, of some novelty value but doomed to rejection by the fans. Clark Griffith screamed that night baseball was profaning the great American pastime, and that the game was meant to be played only in God's own sunshine. That piety lasted only a couple of seasons, however, with Griffiith converting his own park to lights and willing to swap some of the God-given sun for fatter crowd attendance.

The only holdout club against night ball at this moment is the Chicago Cubs, who will get around to it just as soon as the rising costs and diminishing returns of the daylight baseball business make a bigger dent in Phil Wrigley's wallet. The rich take a little longer to be impressed, but gradually they fall into line like Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox, and Walter O. Briggs of Detroit, who decided to tap the night-ball profits.

BRIGGS' Tigers were the last to capitulate. He never quite needed the money, and he took such a dim view of night ball's future a few years back that he even forbade his minor league clubs to install lights on the theory that night-trained rookies would find it too tough in the majors. At is happened, of course other clubs proved that under the finer lighting effects in the majors, night-trained minor leaguers were under no handicap whatsoever.

The public has never made any secret of its preference for night ball. The proof of that was simple enough; they turned out in bigger numbers for night games. Club owners learned that the Nation's leisure class wasn't big enough to make afternoon games profitable as night play. By switching one Yankee Stadium game from day to night last season, the Yankees drew 70,000 against Cleveland against what would have been, they said, a daytime crowd of 30,000.

There have been some beefs by the ball players that they couldn't do as well at night, but nobody listens to that complaint any more. The hitting, fielding and pitching averages have been about the same under both conditions. Ted Williams squawked that he was at a disadvantage, "couldn't see the pitch spinning, like in the daytime," but he continued to lead the league in hitting.

NIGHT BALL has been the salvation of the less wealthy clubs like Washington, the Browns, the Athletics, the White Sox and Reds. It provided a new source of income to enable them to stay in the player market against the rich teams. And their forehandedness in getting into the night business saved them a lot of money. Griffith and Mack put in their lighting systems for $225,000. When the Tigers, Red Sox and Yankees finally saw the light, increased costs upped the expense of lights to nearly a half million dollars.

And the business of lighting the parks has come a long way since MacPhail put in his low-wattage arcs in Cincinnati. Electrical engineers state that the Detroit park is now the best-lighted, but add "only because it's the last one to be lighted. The next one will be the best." The minors, though, still present horrible examples of lighted parks with some of the C and D leagues little better than kerosene-lamp circuits.

Yankee Stadium was the perfect medium for lighting with its high, triple-decked walls the dream of the electrical engineers, providing as it did lighting ceilings in all directions. Toughest of the parks to light were Fenway and Braves Field, in Boston, without high-retaining walls. It's strange, anyway, that the only two single-decked parks in the majors are in Boston.

THE modern lighting bears no resemblance to the old days in Albany, in the International League, for instance, when the rickety system would go out of whack without notice. In Albany they still tell the story of the time that Freddie Sington was at bat in a tense situation with the score tied, the bases full, and two-and-two on the hitter.

The fact that a wild pitcher was out on the mound against Sington was no comfort to him when, as the pitcher wound up, all of the park's lights went out. Sington, highly aware of mankind's first law, hit the dirt in the darkness and covered his head with his hands. He wasn't going to get conked standing up.

"The lights stayed out for a half minute," said Sington, "and lying there I decided I'd look silly caught in that position if the lights did go on again. But before I could get up, the park burst into light again. I looked around pretty sheepishly at first and then I felt better. All of the infielders, the three outfielders and even the pitcher were in the dirt, too, just as scared as I was."

Bearden Says Veeck's Offer Not Enough

Cleveland, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Lean Gene Bearden, Cleveland's cool lefty who won 20 games last season and added a World Series triumph, said today he would have to have more money than he had been offered for 1949.

Bearden, who came here from his Los Angeles home to be guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Cleveland baseball writers, suggested that a bonus clause based on attendance would be nice to have in his contract.

At the same time, President Bill Veeck, who was delayed getting back here from New York because of bad flying conditions, made final preparations for his big signing ceremony tomorrow with Player-Manager Lou Boudreau, who is expected to earn more than $80,000 next year.

He apparently has already agreed to terms and the signing will be simply a formality.

Rounding out a big week in the pen and ink league, Veeck also will be master of ceremonies later on for the signing of his erstwhile right-handed pitching ace, Bobby Feller.

Bearden, selected as "Baseball's Man of the Year" by the Cleveland writers for his three vital victories that gave the Indians the pennant and world championship, said "I am going to see Veeck before I leave and get a better deal."

"After all I'm not getting any younger," he said. He is 28.

Bearden put Cleveland back into a first place tie by winning the next to the last game of the season, then with only a day of rest won the pennant playoff game with the Boston Red Sox. In the World Series he pitched a shutout victory over the Boston Braves in the fourth game.

Armory Twin Bill

GW, Hoyas Play Nation's Top Teams

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Whether or not Washington wants big-time collegiate basketball will be demonstrated here Saturday when two of the best teams in the country, Villanova and North Carolina State, come to town for the first of three doubleheaders against local opposition at the National Guard Armory.

The opener sends Villanova, one of the Nation's four major unbeaten teams, against Georgetown at 8 p. m.

The finale pits NCS, leading the Southern Conference with an unbeaten record, in its second league meeting of the year with George Washington.

Brilliant basketball is assured although both local teams will be underdogs. Even between-halves entertainment will be provided for a crowd that may number as high as 5000.

Midway of the first game, the smallest boxers from Police Boys Club will engage in three bouts and at halftime of the nightcap an exhibition of collegiate wrestling will be staged.

Villanova has chalked up 11 straight victories this season under the guidance of Coach Al Severance. It's a young club, listing nine juniors and three sophs on the first squad, all from Philadelphia and nearby.

Six-foot-three Paul Arizin, from Philadelphia's LaSalle High, is the big gun on a starting quintet that averages well over 6 feet. His 207 points in 11 games gave him eighth ranking among the Nation's point-makers.

Wildcats Are Good

Arizin's outstanding teammates, operating under Coach Severance's fast-breaking system, will be Brooks Ricca, Tommy Sabol, Leo Wolf, Sherwin Raiken and Johnny Crossin. Ricca, Crossin and Sabol were all within four points of Arizin's leading point total—267—last year. Crossin, brother of the Philadelphia Warrior's Chink Crossin, is the team's shortest man at 5-foot-10.

Among the Wildcats' victims so far this season are Loyola (Baltimore), William and Mary, North Carolina State, Rhode Island State, Princeton, Manhattan and St. Francis (Brooklyn).

State's imported Wolf Pack, most of its members from Indiana and the Midwest, invades with a 5-0 mark in the Southern Conference but an over-all record of 10 won and 7 lost. A large part of its losses came after Fred Bartels, a veteran first stringer, was sent home from the Los Angeles Invitational Tournament for breaking training.

Minus Bartels, however, the club has started to click with straight triumphs over Duke and North Carolina, the last by a stunning 67-36 margin.

All-Southern Dick Dickey, a red-headed forward with an uncanny shooting eye, leads the club which already boasts a 66-37 victory over George Washington. He is a mere 6 foot 1, while other members of the first squad—Sam Ranzini, Jack McComas, Warren Cartier and Vic Bubas—range in height up to Paul Horvath's 6 feet 6.

The State team appearing here will be the same as last year's conference championship outfit, except for Bartels and Leo Katkavek.

Caps, Skins at Smoker

Members of the Washington Redskins and Caps will be guests of honor at the Jewish War Veterans' smoker at Heurich gym tonight at 8 o'clock.

Ex-Michigan Star Will Get $10,000

Milwaukee, Jan. 24—(AP)—The University of Wisconsin picked Ivan (Red) Williamson of Lafayette for its head football coach today and it assured him he'll be running his own show in the stormy post vacated by Harry Stuhldreher.

Williamson will receive $10,000 a year and will have the rank of full professor.

At Wisconsin, that means he can't be fired except by the regents after a public hearing.

The former Michigan star, who captained the Wolverines in 1932 after three seasons at end, also was assured by University President E. B. Fred that he was to choose his own assistants.

"Williamson will be in full control of all football activities in the athletic department," Dr. Fred said after the meeting.

Was at Yale, Too

Dr. Fred presented the recommendation made to him by the eight-man athletic board, to the regents.

It read in part:

"This recommendation comes after careful study of the qualifications of many very able coaches. It is our judgment that Mr. Williamson has a sound and thorough knowledge of football and has demonstrated high football coaching skill.

"He was recommended to us as one of the foremost of the country's younger football coaches . . . We have every confidence that he has the ability, skill, judgment and temperament which football coaching at Wisconsin requires."

Since his playing days—he was All-Western Conference as a senior—the Badgers' new head man has concentrated on Eastern activity. He coached football and basketball for one year at Roseville High School near Detroit, but then went to Yale in 1934 as end coach.

He left in 1942 to go into military service, but returned to the Ivy League school in 1946. The following year he became head coach at Lafayette, where his team won six and lost three in 1947 and won seven and lost two last fall. The 1948 losses were to Army and Rutgers.

Has List of 50

The choice came after a busy six weeks for the university athletic board, which made the final recommendation to the regents. The board made up a list of "about 50" outstanding coaches, and shortly after New Year's Day began interviewing top candidates.

Charles (Bud) Wilkinson of Oklahoma, frankly the board's first choice, flew out to look over the setup but returned to Norman to sign a new contract as head coach and athletic director with a salary boost to $15,000.

Bruhn, Line Coach, May Succeed Red

Easton, Pa., Jan. 24 (AP).—Milton Bruhn, line coach and former University of Minnesota lineman, is believed to be the first in line to succeed his old boss, Ivan Williamson, as head football coach at Lafayette, providing he doesn't go along with Williamson to Wisconsin.

When informed here today of his appointment as Wisconsin's new head man, Williamson had no comment on whether he would take any of his assistants with him.

St. Louis Tops Poll Despite Loss

Oregonians Come Up With Brand New Trick

Eugene, Oreg., Jan. 24 (AP).—Just to show what West Coast folks will do to hold their coaches, Oregon officials cooked up a brand new line when Nebraska was trying to pry Jim Aiken away.

Jim is a family man with three children and Mrs. Aiken is a native of the South. The Oregonians didn't waste time on arguments; they merely showed Mrs. Aiken all the pictures they could find of the big blizzard in Nebraska. It wasn't long before Jim decided to stay.

Billikens Beat Out Kentucky, Okla. Aggies Take Third

By Murray Rose

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Despite their loss to Oklahoma A. & M., St. Louis' Billikens still are regarded as the top collegiate cagers in the country by the Nation's sports writers and sportscasters.

The Billikens, rated first a week ago when they were unbeaten, nosed out Kentucky's once-beaten Wildcats in the second Associated Press basketball poll of the season.

While the 29-27 overtime defeat on the Oklahoma A. & M. court didn't drop the Billikens, it served to jump the Aggies from fifth to third place ahead of Western Kentucky.

Western Kentucky, one of the four major unbeaten teams left in the country, dropped to fourth. Minnesota, fourth a week ago, is fifth, followed by Illinois, Hamline, Villanova, San Francisco and Utah.

These 10 teams also were listed as the top 10 a week ago, although the placings were shuffled somewhat today.

Whereas St. Louis (12-1) received a majority of the first-place nominations a week ago, this time it had a battle from the Kentucky supporters.

The Billikens received 39 first-place votes out of 105 ballots cast. A week ago they got 69 out of 93. Ed Hickey's crew collected 938 points, on a 10 for first, 9 for second, 8 for third, etc., basis.

Kentucky (12-1) garnered 896 points and 33 first-place nominations.

The Aggies (10-2) gathered 15 No. 1 votes and 710 points. Western Kentucky (15-0) got nine first placers and 654 points. Minnesota (13-0) was named first eight times and collected 637 points.

Central Routs Chamberlain

Central trampled Chamberlain Vocational, 62-21, yesterday at Central and with their third victory in four starts, the Vikings took over sole possession of first place in the interhigh basketball race.

The undermanned Chamberlain team, in the cellar with four straight loses, opens an interhigh triple-header jamboree at 2 p. m. today against Bell in the National Guard Armory. Anacostia meets Wilson and Roosevelt clashes with Coolidge to round out the unusual bill, highlighting today's 15-game schedule.

Central's close-checking man-for-man defense limited Chamberlain to five points in each of the first three quarters, and loosened up to allow six in the last. The high-powered Vikings scored 24 points in the first half, more than Chamberlain tallied in the entire game.

Leading pointmakers for the Vikings were Jimmy Pantos and Larry Curran, each with 12. Bill Cloud's nine points led the Chamberlain attack.

Indicates Marshal Led the Way

Angry Morabito Says 'Petty' NFL Officials Blocked Peace

San Francisco, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Anthony Morabito, owner of the San Francisco Forty-Niners, today promised the National League a "fight to the death" and said that "petty National League executives" blocked every attempt for peace at the recent meetings with the All-American conference in Chicago.

He indicated that the major stumbling block was refusal of George Marshall of the Washington Redskins to yield and allow Baltimore to compete in Redskins' franchise territory.

"The National League wanted capitulation—not peace," said Morabito. "Instead they are going to get a full-fledged battle to the end."

"We have gone to them several times with peace overtures. But we'll never go again. They'll have to come to us."

In a fighting mood after returning from the unsuccessful metings in Chicago, Morabito warned that his organization was sticking together.

"We will operate as a seven-team league in 1949—and successfully, too," he said. "We are stronger in every department now than we were in 1948 with eight teams."

"There is nothing within reason that the All-America Conference won't do to get peace with the National League," he said, "but we have some valuable franchises and

LeBron Again Whips Cooper

Wild Leo LeBron, a little Canadian who loves rough going, had the time of his life last night as he thumped out a split 10-round decision over Washington's highly-favored Jimmy Cooper at Turner's Arena. Referee Harry Volkman cast the one vote for Cooper.

The affair attracted 855 fans, who paid a gross $1845.96, net $1355.54 for the second meeting of the main-eventers. LeBron took a split decision from Cooper last year. LeBron weighed 123, Cooper 124.

The little Montreal scrapper made light of Cooper's vaunted punch from the outset, dancing out of the way easily and then coming in to land rights and a hooking left almost at will.

Lebron was far ahead on points by the ninth round when Cooper staged a desperate rally.

A bangup five-round semiwindup went to Holly Mims, 151 by split decision over Gene Holly, 152½. Both are of Washington.

Louis' $400,000 Fight Offer Starts Democratic Wrangle

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis' offer to defend his title next June at Soldiers Field for a $400,000 guarantee caused complications today in the Democratic Party here.

Joseph T. Plunkett, special services chairman of the Cooke County central Democratic committee, said the group planned to sponsor the fight in June, but rejected Joe's offer as too expensive.

However, Col. Jack (Jake) Arvey, chairman of the committee, said the matter hasn't even been presented to the committee. He said that Plunkett was "speaking as an individual, not as a member of the Democratic Party."

Plunkett, who earlier had freely discussed plans for a "counter-proposal" to bring a Louis title defense here, could not be reached immediately for comment on Arvey's statement.

As far as Louis is concerned, the champion believes Plunkett represented Arvey and the committee in previous discussions.

At Miami, Fla., Joe's lawyer, Truman Gibson, said he and Marshall Miles, the champion's manager, had given an offer "in writing" for a title match to Plunkett.

"We asked for a $400,000 guarantee, 50 per cent of the movie and radio rights and an exclusive on television rights," Gibson said. "We heard they turned us down, but are offering a counterproposal."

Plunkett had said the counter-offer would include 45 per cent of net receipts, 45 per cent of radio and movie rights and 50 per cent of television.

"Joe is a free agent," Gibson continued, "he can decide for himself. He may accept an offer to appear for seven months with the Daley Brothers Circus—they have offered a half million dollars—or he may go on tour in Canada. He's free to decide for himself."

In New York, Harry Markson, director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said Louis is under contrat to that organization until October 1950 and cannot fight for any other promoter.

Nobody has yet established that Louis will defend his title. "I'll defend it," Louis has said in recent weeks, "if a suitable opponent comes along."

Coaches Differ, Tennesse, Tech Series May End

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 24 (AP). One of Dixie's newest and most bitter football rivalries, Georgia Tech vs. Tennessee, may end because of the apparent inability of the respective coaches to reach a mutually satisfactory playing date.

Tech's Bobby Dodd and Tennessee's Bob Neyland both say they want to continue the series begun in 1945 after a 35-year layoff, but they disagree on the date for the annual game, which is carded this year for November 5.

Dodd wants to open the season against Tennessee. He says Tech will not continue to play Tennessee in November and if Neyland doesn't "agree to the shift, we'll have to drop the game."

Neyland is just as firm in his stand that the game be played in November. He suggests that Dodd figures Tech has a better chance to defeat Tennessee "in the first game than at any other time of the season."

'Three Little Shovels' Planning Garage Under Braves Field, Private Railroad Station

By Joe Levine
United Press Sports Writer

Boston, Jan. 24.—(U.P.)—The "Three Litle Steamshovels," who introduced the fried clam to big league baseball, were busy today with grandiose dreams of building a garage under Braves Field and t king a private railroad station onto the ball park.

The "Steamshovels" are president Lou Perini, Vice-President Guido Rugo and Treasurer C. Joseph Maney, the three imaginative contractors who own the National League Boston Braves.

What started them dreaming was the agreement they signed last week to buy the 10-acre field where for years the club has been only a tenant.

Landlordship set the "shovels" to eyeing their fleets of trucks, bulldozers and bucked cranes. It opened broad new vistas for the trio whose flair for innovation and engineering already has brought many changes to Braves Field.

In the past there were such feats as adding fried clams to the hot dog on the park's menu, building the biggest and gaudiest scoreboard in baseball and lowering part of the diamond in mid-season while the team was away on a short road trip. And bigger things were ahead.

There was the matter of parking space, always at a premium. Fans had suggested, with tongue-in-cheek, that the "shovels" put their talent and tunneling equipment to work in building a subterranean garage under the field.

Maney declined to make any promises, but there was a dreamy look on his face when he said:

"We're going to build a garage under Boston Common."

Perini admitted he was considering the case of fans who come to Braves games by train. The field adjoins the Boston & Albany tracks, but customers coming from west of Boston must go a distance beyond the park and return by streetcar or taxicab.

Why not, asked Perini, talk to the railroad people about building a Braves Field station? There even was the chance the B. & A. might run special trains from downtown Boston to the field, which is a few miles out in suburban Allston. Perini scheduled a conference.

The traffic problem encountered by automobile-borne fans was the concern of Rugo.

Just across the railroad tracks behind Braves Field is a broad, smooth highway beside the Charles River. The way it is now, motorists have to drive in circles and buck plenty of traffic to get from that highway to the ball park. There's no shortcut across the tracks.

But Rugo knew as well as anyone else that a parking lot might be built down by the river. And then, what would be more natural than to have one of the "shovels"—say Rugo—construct a flossy aerial footbridge over the railroad tracks to the park?

Hughson Back From Minors, Signs for '49

Boston, Jan. 24 (AP).—Accompanied by a letter in which he wrote he was "confident of taking his regular turn" at pitching, the signed contract of Rex Sox Right Hander Tex Hughson arrived at Fenway Park today.

Hughson, who dropped down to Austin, Tex., of the Class B Big State League last season after an elbow operation and then finished out the year with the Boston Amircan League club, could be a factor in any Sox drive for the pennant this summer.

Hughson, who operates a ranch, a wholesale meat business and rents freezing lockers in San Marcos, Tex., also wrote to General Manager Joe Cronin:

"My elbow has given me no trouble whatsoever and I'm extremely happy the Sox indicated such confidence in me as they did in the inclosed contract."

Cronin reflected, "it would be nice to have the Hughson of old around again."

we are not going to throw them away."

Morabito said that there was "very slim" possibility that more than seven teams would compete in the A-A in 1949.

"Dallas, Houston and New Orleans all have been mentioned," he said. He said the AAC was willing to either merge with the National or work in cooperation as a separate league—as the major baseball loops do.

"But they wanted only capitulation," he said. "They've asked for a good battle and they're going to get it. We've tried all we can."

Touchdowners Have Caps as Honor Guests

Before opening a six-game road trip the Washington Caps, a virtual cinch to take the Eastern Division crown in the Basketball Association of America, will be the Touchdown Club's guests of honor today at 12:30.

Owner Mike Uline and Coach Red Auerbach will be the main speakers, to be introduced by Carroll Bird, Touchdown Club president. Special tribute will be paid to the Caps' Capt. Bob Feerick and Bones McKinney. Feerick has tallied 51 points and McKinney 63 points in the Caps' last three games.

The torrid Caps open their road trip tomorrow at Baltimore against the Bullets, moved to Boston to face the Celtics on Friady, and before returning to Washington face the Minneapolis Lakers, Indianapolis Jets twice and the St. Louis Bombers. The next home game will be against New York's Knickerbockers on February 5.

NY-Brooklyn May Land Ratterman

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The New Yankee-Dodger combine of the All America Football Conference will soon sign George Ratterman, quarterback of the Buffalo Bills, the New York Daily Mirror reported tonight.

The paper said Dan Topping, president of the New York team, declined to confirm or deny the report but acknowledged "a deal for an outstanding T-quarterback is in the process." The Bills are determined to sign Notre Dame's Frank Tripucka, the Mirror added.

Officials of the team were not available for comment.

Two Texans Play Off for Title Today

London Beach, Calif., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Steel-nerved Ben Hogan sank a 15-foot putt on the eighteenth green today to tie Jimmy Demaret for the $10,000 Long Beach Open golf tournament title with 72-hole totals of 272.

Setting the stage for an 18-hole playoff battle tomorrow for the $2000 first place money, the two golfing pals from Texas finished the 72-hole tournament deadlocked at 272—Demaret with a 5-under-par 66 for his final burst, and Hogan, with a ton of pressure on his sturdy little back, with a 68.

Knotted just behind at 274 were young Jack Burke, jr., now of White Plains, N. Y., with a final round 71, and Lloyd Mangrum, whose belated bid was a spectacular 64 that equalled the competitive course recorded for the par 35, 36—71 Lakewood Country Club. The course measures 6235 yards, is narrow and noted for its water hazards.

Furgol at 277

Trailing these leaders were Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, N. Mex., with 69 for 277; Jim Ferrier, San Francisco, 71 for 278, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., with 69 for 279.

Excitement mounted as the players came to the wire. Mangrum took a temporary lead with his 31-33—64. Burke, a 25-year-old pro whose father, the late Jack Burke, sr., taught Demaret some of his golf at Houston, and the leader entering the final round today, needed a 70 to beat Mangrum, a 71 to tie him. He got the 71.

Then flashy Demaret came in with his 66. He almost made it 65 but missed an eagle on the eighteenth green by a matter of inches. Hogan was playing three three-somes behind and learned by the grapevine that he had a job ahead—a four-under-par to win, a 68 to tie.

Ben Sinks It

Coming up to the 475-yard eighteenth hole he had to bag a birdie-4 to catch Demaret. His second shot was short and to the left of the green. His chip-up fell short 15 feet from the cup. He had to make the putt. He made it.

The playoff tomorrow starts at 11:30 a. m. (P.S.T.).

Burke's scores were 68-69-66-71—274 and Mangrum had 70-71-69-64—274.

Listed behind at 280 with a 69 today was Bob Hamilton from Evansville, Ind., and Landover, Md.; Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich., 68 for 281; and tied at 282 were Chick Harbert with a 74; Fred Haas, jr., New Orleans, 72, and Glenn Teal, Jacksonville, Fla., 70.

"An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest"

from
POOR RICHARD said it, some two hundred years ago, and Dr. V. K. Zworykin, recently honored by the Poor Richard Club, is an example of Ben Franklin's living wisdom.

Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin

FOR his outstanding contributions to electronics, particularly to the development of television, Dr. Vladimir Kosma Zworykin—Vice President and Technical Consultant of RCA Laboratories—has received the Gold Medal Award for Achievement of the Poor Richard Club, presented each year on the anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin. This, in a sense, is an important and well-earned honor from one world-famous scientist to another!

BUT FAR MORE than in personal fame or gain, Dr. Zworykin's knowledge has "paid interest" to the world. From him have come the basic devices of modern television. While others were experimenting with mechanical means of telecasting, Dr. Zworykin invented the iconoscope, the first electronic "eye" for the television camera, and developed the kinescope, the electron tube in the receiving set which shows you the television picture.

Recognition of the importance of these advances came in the Twenties, when Dr. Zworykin described them to Brig. General David Sarnoff, head of RCA. Envisaging the immense potentialities of all-electronic television, General Sarnoff enthusiastically encouraged Dr. Zworykin to continue his work. Since then, millions of dollars have been spent by RCA in the development of television in the interest of national security and as a service to the public.

That television has become a powerful force in education as well as in entertainment is due in large part to the many scientific contributions of Dr. Zworykin. Daily, thousands of households are joining the million already equipped with television for entertainment, news and sports. . . . In the field of medicine, television as a "lecture hall," brings the hands of skilled surgeons into close-up view of hundreds of other doctors miles away. . . . Schools also are examining the possibilities of television as an adjunct to classroom instruction.

Another development by Dr. Zworykin and the group of scientists working with him at RCA—the electron microscope—has proved its tremendous value. An outgrowth of television research, the electron microscope, with its ability to magnify objects up to 200,000 times, has opened a new sub-microscopic world to science and industry.

RCA is proud to join the Poor Richard Club in honoring Dr. Zworykin and proud that his knowledge "pays interest" to the public in terms of the finer performance and greater value of instruments bearing the name RCA or RCA Victor.

As an example, RCA Victor's new table model, the "Bystander"—so powerful it opens new areas to television reception—is priced at only $325 plus installation.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Coordinating Agency Under White House Control Is Debated

New: A new agency under the White House that would coordinate public relations, office space, research, records management, statistics, reports, and publications is being debated by the Hoover Commission.

Another proposal up for consideration would permit top-ranking career people to be shifted from one job to another in order to broaden their experience. Subject to transfers would be personnel, budget, and executive officers.

The plan under discussion is similar to that in practice now in England. However, the English also subjects undersecretaries and other little cabinet members to frequent tranfers.

The commission can be expected to recommend that the National Security Resources Board and the National Security Council be brought directly under the White House.

MEETING: The Senate Civil Service Committee will hold a general organization meeting today. Chairman Johnston will appoint a subcommittee to hold public hearings on the several pay raise bills. Appointments to the committee staff also will be made.

APPEALS: The President is reported to have decided to support a plan to set up an all-civilian board to hear and decide the appeals of military people who have been convicted through courts-martial.

NOTES: Employes of the Public Health Service say they have been charged four hours annual leave because of a bookkeeping mixup . . . Dr. Lauriston S. Taylor is the new assistant chief of the atomic and molecular physics division of the Bureau of Standards. He's an expert in X-ray research . . . Dr. Myer Kessler has been appointed to the Bureau of Standards staff to work on microwave developments.

POEM: Here's a jingle in which there is more truth than poetry. It's title: FEDERAL EMPLOYE:

In response to each request
He willingly conforms
He is a public servant
And escapes all wrathful storms.

If he declines because a law
Says, no, he can't do that,
Instead of public servant
He's a blasted bureaucrat.

PAY RAISES for Federal judges were proposed in identical bills introduced yesterday in both the Senate and the House.

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) and Rep. Celler (D., N. Y.), chairmen of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees, advocated a $9500 increase for the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court—from $25,000 to $35,000—and a boost of $5000 for each of the other Federal judges. The Federal judges were given $5000 pay raises in 1946.

The chairman said 337 judges would benefit from their bills. They estimated its cost at $1,689,500 a year. The Hoover Commission is reported to have indorsed a similar plan to raise judicial salaries.

EXAMS: Mathematical, analytical and survey statistician, $3727 to $5232; statistical assistant, $3727 to $4479; statistical officer, $4855 to $7432; staff nurse, $2974; head nurse, $3727; physical science and biological aide, $2152 to $3727.

The nearly 1600 persons here who applied for the substitute railway postal clerk exam will be examined beginning Saturday and through February 5 in Tempo D Building. More than 75,000 persons applied for the test, about 23,700 in New York alone.

JOBS: Civil Service next month will announce engineer trainee jobs in the Bureau of Reclamation to start at $2498 to $2724 a year . . . For the first time in years, Civil Service has a surplus of P-1 engineer eligibles. It has about 225 available people for 10 specialized engineering jobs on its list . . . An exam for industrial hygienist is slated to be announced soon by Civil Service. The jobs pay from $3727 to $6235 to start. There are openings in Navy and other Federal agencies.

MEMBERS: This is the background on additional members of the House Civil Service Committee:

EUGENE J. McCARTHY is the youngest committee member. He's 32 and a Democrat from St. Paul. During the war he was a civilian technical employe in Army Intelligence so he knows about working for Uncle Sam from personal experience. McCarthy also has taught in both Minnesota high schools and colleges.

HOMER THORNBERRY is another young Democrat. He's 39 and he's from Austin, Tex. He's a lawyer and he served in the State Legislature and as district attorney. He's a veteran and was discharged as a lieutenant commander from the Navy.

JAMES V. BUCKLEY is a Democrat from Lansing, Ill. He's 56. Buckley has a background of both business and labor. He was in the building business 25 years with his brother. On the employe side, he was president of his CIO local of the United Auto Workers.

Injuries Kill Man Struck Running to Cross Street

Both Legs, Pelvis Fractured When Hit by Car; Fifth '49 Traffic Death

D. C. traffic deaths 1949 5
Deaths this time last year 4
Total traffic deaths 1948 67

A 52-year-old pedestrian, struck by an automobile while running across the street against a red light Sunday night, died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital.

He was Edward Ames of 931 M st. nw., who suffered a fractured pelvis and fractures of both legs.

Police said Ames was running across E st. at N. Capitol st., when he was struck by a car operated by Edward W. Murphy, 23, employed at the American Pharmaceutical Association. Murphy, who lives at 1420 Utah st., Arlington, Va., will appear at a coroner's inquest at a date to be set.

In a District traffic accident yesterday, Joseph Comilo, 32, a taxicab owner of 73 K st. nw, sustained scalp lacerations and a punctured left side, when his cab and a truck collided at 13th and W sts. nw.

Comilo was admitted to Garfield Hospital in undetermined condition. Police said the truck was driven by Willard Lee Shirkey, 42, an iron worker, of Annandale, Va.

Jury Clears Motorist In Traffic Death Here

A coroner's jury yesterday cleared Benjamin S. Hall, jr., 36, of 1416 Carrollburg pl. sw., in the traffic death last Saturday of Mrs. Lillie Mae Butler, 25, killed about 1:50 a. m. as she was crossing M st. sw. at Howison pl.

Hall, who said he did not see his car strike Mrs. Butler of 432 New York ave. nw., was charged with failure to give full time and attention. The six man jury deliberated about 40 minutes before ruling the death was the result of an accident.

Miss Nettie Ford, 18, of 432 New York ave. nw. testified that Mrs. Butler, who had an impediment in one eye, was not wearing her glasses at the time of the accident. Officer Frederick G. Williams of the accident investigation unit said Hall stated he was driving east on M st. at about 25 miles an hour in a drizzling rain when the accident occurred and did not see his car strike the woman. Hall told police he stopped to investigate when he heard a "thump." The glare of street lights in the rain is considerable at the intersection, the officer testified. He said Mrs. Butler was wearing a Kelly green coat which would appear black at that time of night.

Drivers Freed in Fatal Police Van Collision

Both drivers were found guilty yesterday in the collision last September 15 of a police van and an automobile, in which a policeman was killed.

Judge Armond W. Scott in Traffic Court ruled that both Pvt. Earl Johnson, 48, of 629 Quebec pl. nw., driver of the van, and James J. Hartin, 54, of 1803 M st. ne., driver of the automobile, were guilty of failing to give full time and attention.

But with the concurrence of Clark F. King, Assistant Corporation Counsel, Judge Scott stated both men had suffered sufficiently, and he freed them on their personal bond, equivalent to an indefinite suspension of sentence.

Pvt. Mortimer P. Donoghue, 58, of 4902 Kansas ave. nw., was killed in the collision at 5th and K sts. nw. Two prisoner passengers were hospitalized, and eight others suffered minor injuries. A coroner's jury ruled the death accidental.

Mid-City Citizens Commend Police Force

The Mid-City Citizens Association commended Maj. Robert J. Barrett and Metropolitan police force last night for the "fine way (they) conducted themselves and the crowds during the Inaugural ceremonies."

At its meeting in the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw., the group also favored a 2 per cent sales tax for the District, providing personal property and income taxes are eliminated.

Holtzoff Lists District Needs In Crime Fight

Place of Confinement For Feeble-Minded Criminals Cited as One

Places of confinement for feeble-minded criminals and those of the young "middle group" are two of the District's most pressing needs in the war against crime, District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff said last night.

Judge Holtzoff spoke before the Society of Natives at the Mayflower Hotel. He defined the "middle group" as young persons too old for juvenile institutions but who should not be thrown among hardened criminals.

At present there is no choice but to send these to the Lorton Reformatory, he said, adding that feeble-minded criminals must be sent there as well.

Judge Holtzoff took exception to the popular belief that crime's major cause is poverty, stating that he believes ignorance to be the prime cause.

"It is rare that a man commits a serious offense because he or his family is hungry or without shelter," the jurist said. More often crimes of a serious nature are committed by the lazy or shiftless seeking "easy money" or by employed persons attempting to augment their income, he said.

By ignorance, the judge said he meant the failure to understand the principles of right living. This is attributed in many cases to the home, where the right kind of parental care is not forthcoming, he said.

Northwest Council Hits Citizens' Federation

Immediate reform in the Federation of Citizens Associations' conduct of its business meetings was called for last night in a resolution adopted by the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations.

During the discussion, council members specifically assailed conduct of the federation's January 15 meeting at which the federation voted to reply to the recent report of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital.

The council met at the home of Harry C. Grove, 2708 Cathedral ave. nw.

Fifteen council delegates representing nine member associations unanimously approved the resolution, which deplored the Federation's procedure which it declared is not in accordance with the Federation's constitution or the Roberts Rules of Order."

Oldest Inhabitants Oppose Discrimination

The Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., last night adopted a resolution opposing "discriminatory practices" because of race, creed or color in Government housing and redevelopment projects.

Meeting at 9th and T sts. nw., the association voted to recommend to the District Redevelopment Land Agency that contracts for public housing and redevelopment "carry a prohibition against refusal to sell, lease or rent because of race, creed or color."

The resolution also recommended that provisions be made to place "limitations on rent, cost of improvement and character of maintenance."

Opposed in Georgetown Rezoning McLean Property

Opposition to rezoning the property of the late Evelyn Walsh McLean at Wisconsin ave. and R st. nw., and land at Wisconsin ave. and Whitehaven st. was voted last night by the Georgetown Citizens Association, meeting at St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O sts. nw.

A change of listing to permit construction of apartments and commercial building is sought for the McLean property, it was said. Apartments would be built on the Wisconsin-Whitehaven site.

Question of Who Owes Whom Under Study by Judge Myers

The question of who owes whom between Uncle Sam as landlord and a pair of tenants in a Benning rd. housing development, whose rent he raised, was taken under advisement yesterday by Judge Frank Myers in Municipal Court.

The National Capital Housing Authority last week sued Morris Kalstein and his wife, Beatrice, 717 46th st. se., for $28 back rent. The Kalsteins filed through Herman Miller, their attorney, a countersuit for $612, claiming the NCHA had illegally raised their rent, first from $26 a month to $33, then to $44, without applying for such increases through the District rent control administrator.

The Kalsteins say they rented the house September 16, 1943, at $26 a month. On August 1, 1946, they assert, their rent was raised to $33 a month, which they paid until February, 1948, when the accumulated overcharge totaled $126. They ask double the amount of this alleged illegal overcharge as provided by the District rent control law.

On March 1, 1948, the NCHA raised the rent to $44, but the Kalsteins continued paying $33 and altogether, they figure, the NCHA owes them $612 in overcharges and penalties.

The NCHA asked dismissal of the countersuit on grounds, first, that the Municipal Court cannot entertain a suit against the United States, and, second, that the United States cannot be sued without permission of Congress.

The Kalsteins base their action on a ruling by the United States Court of Appeals here some months ago that, in owning this particular kind of housing development, the Government is a landlord within the meaning of local rent control statutes. Miller thus contends the United States is liable to suit in this case.

Traffic Tickets Adjusted for 90 Here in a Week

Two motorists, who placed their coins in the wrong meter after parking downtown, were among 90 persons for whom traffic tickets were adjusted last week, police reported yesterday.

The two men were Rufus Mundy, 63, of 118 F st. nw., and Benjamin H. Evans, 39, Baltimore, Md., according to police.

Traffic tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity: Ivan Ehrning, Swedish Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Alfredo Leiton, Argentine Embassy, parked in a "no parking anytime" zone; A. I. Mohammed, Embassy of Iraq, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p. m" zone; A. E. Percival, British Embassy, standing in a "no standing from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Youssef B. Rakha, Egyptian Embassy, failing to park to curb.

Age Proof Required of Young Drivers

Because of a marked increase in age misrepresentation, applicants between 16 and 18 years of age who seek District driving permits must show birth, baptismal or school certificates after Wednesday.

In announcing the ruling, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp revealed yesterday that cases of age falsification had increased 50 per cent during the last year.

Keneipp said he had received many letters from parent and citizen groups, complaining about driving applicants giving false ages. Typical of the letters is one from the Northeast Neighborhood Council, which stressed the danger of allowing underage youths to drive, Keneipp said.

The letter emphasized that Juvenile Court always checks the Bureau of Vital Statistics to insure that the ages given for children are correct, and that the school attendance department refuses to issue work permits without presentation of a birth certificate. Therefore, it was contended, ages should be verified before granting of auto permits.

Keneipp said the new ruling comes under Article X, Section 64 (b) of the Traffic and Motor Vehicle Regulations, which provides that the applicant for a permit must give his true and lawful name and signature and correct address and "such other information as may be requested."

D. C. Budget Hearings To Begin on Wednesday

Record $103 Million Measure Geared to Approval of Sales Tax of 2 Per Cent

Formal hearings on the record 103-million-dollar budget for the year starting July, 1949, will begin Wednesday before the House District Appropriations Subcommittee.

Subcommittee Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) said he hoped to complete the hearings on the city budget and the preparation of the District appropriation bill by the middle of March.

Such a deadline for finishing House committee work on the budget is well ahead of the starting date for District budget hearings that has been usual in recent years.

Bates said the plan for the early completion of work on the city budget was keyed into the aim of House Appropriations Committee Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) to wind up committee work on other appropriations bills by mid-April.

Bates said his own aim would be to bring city expenditures within the available revenue. "My main interest will be staying within our income," he said. If extra revenue is to be raised, said Bates "as an individual member I'm inclined to think that the sales tax is not the best solution to be found."

The budget, as submitted to Congress by the Commissioners, is keyed to approval of a sales tax. Without enactment of the 2 per cent sales tax, the budget total would create a deficit of some 8 million dollars.

That deficit would be boosted to around 18 million dollars by congressional enactment of a retroactive $330 pay raise for the District's 18,000 employes.

There is also legislation to give 7600 District classified employes another $650 boost effective January 1, 1949. That would add close to five million more to the city deficit for a full year.

Meanwhile, Frank Sanders was assigned to be clerk of the District Appropriations Subcommittee. A native of Tarboro, N. C., Sanders graduated from Western High School here in 1936. He did surveying and engineering work on the Pennsylvania turnpike.

During four years of Army service, he worked up from private to a captain of Field Artillery and saw action in North Africa and Italy. He served as secretary to Representative John H. Kerr (D., N. C.) from 1945 until his recent assignment of the staff of the House Appropriations Committee.

Inaugural Tax Bill Waits on Revenue Men

Bureau Must Rule On Tricky Questions To Establish Total

The total amusement tax bill owed by the 1949 Inaugural Committee depends on delicate rulings yet to be made by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Before the 20 per cent tax can be paid, chairman Melvin D. Hildreth revealed yesterday, the bureau must mix protocol and law, to come up with answers to these questions:

1. Must the committee pay a tax on the parade seat of President Truman? If so, what was the value of that seat?

2. Is the pass given to Margaret Truman for the preinaugural gala within a taxable classification?

3. How about the 5000 seats given to Governors, heads of diplomatic missions, President Truman's Battery D buddies, entertainment stars and other distinguished guests? Are they taxable and if so at what value?

May Run To $75,000

In any case the bill, which may run to an estimated $75,000, is not due until the end of February, a bureau spokesman said yesterday. Admission taxes are payable at the end of the month after which they were incurred.

The committee did not learn it would have to pay the tax until two days before the Inaugural, when the Senate defeated a bill which would have exempted tickets from the levy.

Any profits from the Inaugural were to have gone to charity, with distribution through the Community Chest. Possibility of any profits, now that the amusement tax must be paid, is remote, Hildreth said. Losses would be borne by merchants who put up $227,000 to underwrite expenses.

Conferences Scheduled

Conference between the bureau and the Inaugural Committee are scheduled for the early future to iron out problems. Meanwhile, a team of accountants is auditing the committee's books.

Hildreth said the law requires the tax must be paid on passes issued to anyone over 14 years of age, on the basis of value of comparable seats.

The press watched the ceremonies from seats similar to those which sold for $10, Hildreth said. But the Inaugural chairman believes that taxation of these seats would be an unfair interpretation of the law. These seats were not occupied for enjoyment, Hildreth said.

Television Posts High

Determination of the price of a seat occupied by television cameramen would be most difficult, he added. The committee spent more than $1500 to brace the 40-foot stand. The cost of those seats was in the neighborhood of $100 apiece, he said.

Four years hence, the committee would have television broadcasters themselves pay for construction of the stands, Hildreth said. The committee financed their construction this year, he said, because this was the first inaugural ever to be televised.

Seats similar to the 5000 distributed free to dignitaries sold for $8, Hildreth said. If the Bureau of Internal Revenue rules the free seats also have a value of $8, the committee will owe a tax bill of $8000 on them alone.

Correction

The recital by Paul Chandler Hume, baritone, listed in Sunday's Amusement Calendar for Friday night is to be given on Saturday evening, January 29, at 8:30 o'clock at the International Student House, 1825 R st. nw.

Man Booked In Arlington Holdup Case

Donald M. McKinnon, 22, who police say got three teen-age girls to help him in two nearby Virginia holdups, yesterday was charged with robbery by Arlington police in the pistol-point stickup of an Arlington grocery.

He is accused of holding up a grocery store at 5405 Lee Hwy. last Wednesday night with the aid of two girls, one 16, and the other, who calls herself "Sylvia the Safecracker," aged 14.

According to the Arlington Commonwealth's attorney's office, McKinnon, who lives at 207 C st. nw., probably will be arraigned Wednesday in Arlington County Court.

He already has been charged by Fairfax police with holding up and robbing Sweeney's Trailer Camp on Fairfax Circle on January 13.

On this occasion, Fairfax police say, "Sylvia" and a third girl, age 17, helped him. The two holdups netted a total of $190, police said.

"Sylvia" and the 17-year-old girl were being held by Fairfax authorities yesterday for a Juvenile Court hearing January 28.

The third teen-ager, accused of participating in the Arlington stickup, was questioned informally in Arlington Juvenile Court yesterday pending a formal hearing at an unspecified later date.

Harry the Mimic Steals the Show

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: The best comedy moment on the screens this week comes, of all people, from President Truman. . . . You get less than a minute of his mimicry of H. V. Kaltenborn, but this minute is as amusing as it is surprising. . . . The moment, of course, is that widely publicized one at the Inauguration Eve dinner during which the President described how he spent Election Day. . . . "I had my sandwich and a glass of buttermilk," he tells you, "and went to bed early." . . . About midnight he got up and tuned in to NBC's "Keltenborn," he pronounces the name as if it were spelled K-e, instead of K-a, reminding me of the trouble my mother also had with the commentator's name. . . . The President's mimicry is delightfully funny, capturing that chopped percision that has made Kaltenborn's voice so familiar to us all. . . . And, as the Capitol's headline mimic, Sibyl Bowman, points out, he winds it up with the air of a skilled comedian; when a boffo laugh begins to fade, he waves his hand, steps up his tempo and clips out: "So I went back to bed and went to sleep." . . . If Everybody's Harry can do as well with other personalities as he does with H. V., he can get a week on the Capitol stage any time he wants to and the professional impressionists can look for new work. . . . Gosh, and he plays the piano, too. . . . Congratulations, Mr. President, on a swell performance; I've been paid to sit through a lot that weren't half as good as yours.

THE NEWSREEL I caught, by the way, was the Twentieth Century Movietone at the Capitol, but you can pick up Mr. Muto or his contemporaries at any of the first-run houses.

WELL, ALL THE FLOATS are off the streets, after "setting" in same for several days after the big parade . . . Saturday, Float Chairman Hardie Meakin was "still finding floats all over town," where they'd been towed and left by the happy paraders . . . They're mostly all being dismantled, but several, under new bunting, will be popping up in Alexandria's big parade celebrating its 200th year as a city.

NORA WILLIAMS is a name vaudeville fans will happily recall. Nora and her rowdy-dowdy version of "Piccolo Pete" . . . Well, by golly, I ran into Nora at a party the other day, and just as I'd hoped, she sang "Piccolo Pete" . . . Now she's Mrs. George O'Brien of Alexandria, and with her husband seems to run the White House Sightseeing Corp., a job she likes (that and being a grandmother), but every once in a while the old bell rings and Nora takes on a benefit or a party, thereby adding no end to the spice of things . . . Her next "return" will be at Sidney Lust's Cheverly, a Boys Club benefit, February 2 . . . The nicest thing about Nora—who was on the closing bill of the old Palace two-a-day regime and the opening of the Center, in Radio City—is that she's still got that zing with a song . . . I think she'd be a wow at the Capitol . . . How about luring her back for a full week, boys?

THE PLEASURE FUND of the Children's Museum will be host Saturday at both performances of "Poor Little Rich Girl" to a hundred youngsters from Washington's settlement houses and orphanages. . . . This fund is made up of voluntary contributions to supply tickets for children who would not otherwise see these plays by the Clare Tree Major group . . . Saturday's guests at the Virginia Theater, Alexandria, where the group is forced to perform this year, will include children from St. Vincent's Home, St. John's Orphanage, the Juanita K. Nye Home, Georgetown House, and Hillcrest, the children's village . . . For agencies which do not have sufficient transport, friends are chipping in car space.

THE MOUNT VERNON Players have a busy week . . . Thursday night their latest production, "The Drunkard," opens a 15-day run under the direction of Kenneth Raskin . . . Tickets at District 1484 or at the Undercroft Auditorium of the players at the Mount Vernon Church, 900 Mass. ave . . . Tonight and Wednesday there'll be tryouts for the next production, "Knickerbocker Holiday," the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical which Vera Mowry will direct . . . Tryout time both nights is 8:30 at the drama office of the church.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY'S stimulating drama department head will miss tonight's opening of the Howard Players in Saroyan's "The Beautiful People." . . . That charming lady, Dr. Anne Cooke, is convalescing from a Mayo Clinic session at her home, 2319 Adams st., Gary, Ind., but reports she's feeling better, though "out of touch." . . . The Howard Players act in a tiny theater in Spaulding Hall on the campus; reservations may be made at Dupont 6100, ext. 417, or at the theater box office.

Trumans Receive Diplomatic Chiefs At Blair House Tea

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Truman received chiefs of mission of the Diplomatic Corps and their wives at tea yesterday afternoon at Blair House.

It is White House tradition that the Chief Executive and the First Lady entertain shortly after the President's inauguration, to give the foreign envoys an opportunity to pay their respects. The acting dean of the corps, Julian Caceres, Ambassador of Honduras, and Senora de Caceres, were first to be received in the absence of the dean of the corps, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne who is in Oslo.

The only absentees from the group, in addition to Ambassador Morgenstierne, were the Danish Ambassador, Hendrik de Kauffmann, who is in Denmark, and the Swedish Ambassador, Erik Boheman, also in his native country. They were represented by their respective charge d'affairs.

Only diplomatic uniform was the gold-braided black worn by the Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin.

President and Mrs. Truman and the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson received the guests in the rear drawing room, with Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol, making the introductions. The White House, Army, Navy and Air Force aides stood at attention behind the receiving line.

Mrs. Truman wore a long crepe gown of eggplant tone with a diagonal drapery crossing from the right shoulder to the left hip and held by a pink rose. Mrs. Acheson's gown was of gunmetal taffeta, street length, and with it she wore a pink hat trimmed with a single rose.

Mrs. Robert Lovett, wife of the former Secretary of State, had come along as Mr. Lovett is in New York, and also there were the new Undersecretary of State, James E. Webb and Mrs. Webb.

Once all guests had been received, President and Mrs. Truman led the way to Blair Lee House through a connecting door, for tea. The Marine Band Orchestra played during the afternoon.

Era of Elegantes

Trust Plans to Restore That Gay 1870 Look To Virginia City

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HELEN MARYE THOMAS is in town briefly, relaxing from rebuilding her Bar S ranch house near Reno, Nev. The daughter of George Marye, former Ambassador to Russia, Helen is rushing back to Nevada to head the Virginia City Non-Profit Trust for the Preservation of Virginia City.

Virginia City, some 50 miles distant from Mrs. Thomas' ranch, is one of the great mining boomtown cities. At its peak, some 40,000 dug into the famous Comstock Lode, or catered to wild-and-woolly fellow inhabitants. Today, there are just 800 Virginia Citians.

The ghost town, built on some 600 miles of mining tunnels, is pretty much intact, but the buildings need propping and redoing. The Trust is planning to issue certificates selling from $1 to $100, and copied from a variety of designs used on old mining stock certificates. Once the money has been raised (the necessary sum is still unestimated) some 18 of the old buildings will be renovated, and C street, the town's main stem, will be stripped of such modern hideosites as neon lights, returned to its lush early '70s decor.

First on the list is Piper's Opera House where, during the boom decades from early 60s to early 80s, such divas as Jenny Lind warbled. Second will be the Fourth Ward schoolhouse which will be revamped into a museum. The main street still boasts 18 bars, all in good working order. Among the old-timers are "The Bucket of Blood," "The Sawdust Corner," "The Wonder Lode," "The '62," which was so named because its elegant mahogany bar sailed from England around Cape Horn, finally arrived in Nevada in 1862. Since some 700 million dollars worth of ore was hauled from the Comstock Lode, the grandeur of old-time Virginia City can be imagined.

THE MACKAY, Fair, Flood and O'Brien fortunes were hacked from this small bit of earth—and many other social elegantes of today owe their sables, diamonds and champagne to a grandpa energetic enough to scrabble around Virginia City. Helen Marye Thomas' grandfather, George Thomas Marye, was one of the local bankers and brokers. Her father's house is still standing on the main street.

Hays Asks Civil Rights Compromise

Calling himself a Southerner and a Democrat, but not "that much-maligned, fictional character, the Southern Democrat," Representative Brooks Hays said yesterday that compromise was the only loyal attitude to take in the civil rights issue. Representative Hays will introduce a bill in Congress sometime this week embodying his compromise proposals on the civil rights program.

Speaking before the Woman's National Democratic Club luncheon, the Arkansas Democrat said that of the four-point Truman civil rights program, only anti-lynching could be strictly considered civil rights. The other points, he said, were social aspirations.

Proponents of poll tax repeal should do it by constitutional amendment, Representative Hays said. Toeing the middle-of-the-road policy, the Arkansas Congressman said nonsegregation should be limited to interstate travel. "Surely the Federal Government will not undertake to overturn the pattern of life and the social mores of a community," he said.

For the Fair Employment Practice Commission, he proposed a counciling service in the Department of Labor whose motto would be "fairness to everyone." Educational methods, not coercion, is the answer to the FEPC question.

In conclusion, Representative Hayes said, "we can, by a compromising spirit, settle this issue without either side sacrificing principles."

The Arkansas Democrat, who has been a Congressman since the Seventy-eighth Congress, was introduced by Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, president, presided at the meeting.

Mrs. George Honored At Mayflower Luncheon

MRS. Walter F. George of Georgia, who with her husband, Senator George, makes her home at the Mayflower, was the ranking guest at a luncheon given there yesterday by Mrs. Ernest Daniel for Mrs. Clinton H. Haske, 2d, of Chicago. Others in the party were Mrs. William H. Arnold, Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Alan Ferguson and Mrs. Humphrey Daniel.

Others seen lunching in the lounge and enjoying the parade of spring fashions by Jelleff's included Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Carl W. Markham of Columbus, Ohio, Jock McLean, who had just arrived from his home in Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Lee, of Dallas, and many more.

Continue Un-American Inquiry, Club Federation Urges Congress

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday urged Congress to continue the work of the Un-American Activities Committee, and asked the District Commissioners and the Police Department to prohibit sale of comic books dealing in sex, crimes and sadism.

At an all-day meeting in the Hamilton Hotel, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the department of legislation, presented five resolutions, all of which were passed by the federation.

The resolution on the Un-American Activities Committee reads

"Whereas, it has been proven by the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives, that communism, a world revolutionary movement governing the lives of millions of the human race, is planning to overthrow our Government;

"Whereas, the exposure of this Communist plot, begun in a systematic way in the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1938, which has been going on ever since, is bringing to light enemies within our midst who aim to undermine our American institutions and system of Government;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs . . . commends the defensive work done by the House Committee on Un-American Activities during the past 10 years, and urges Congress to continue in this field, in order to give the Congress and the people needed information on communism, as the surest way of awakening public sentiment against this danger . . ."

The federation also passed a motion approving two bills to increase the number of judges in the D. C. courts, two for the Court of Appeals and three for the Municipal Court.

A General Federation of Women's Club resolution, passed in Portland, Oreg., was approved by the local club. It protests discriminations against women in Government appointments and urges the appointment of qualified women to positions of responsibility in the various departments and agencies of the District of Columbia."

Capital Beauty to Model At Paris Fashion Openings

By Peggy Preston

WASHINGTON, city of signal honors, adds another feather to its chapeau this week.

One of its fair citizens, Mrs. Alden G. Thompson, has been selected by a French designer as the most representative American fashion model, and invited to come to Paris for the fashion openings there in February.

Mrs. Thompson, known professionally as Nancy Thompson, leaves for the French capital from National Airport at 12 noon Thursday, January 27. She will make the journey via Eastern Air Lines, Inc., and French National Airlines.

During her two weeks' stay in Paris she will model at the famous fashion house of Pierre Balmain, the designer who selected her as the outstanding American model. Mr. Balmain met Nancy in Washington last year when she modeled several of his gowns at a fashion show given by Julius Garfinckel & Co.

"I'm just about as thrilled as you can get," said Nancy yesterday at a press conference at the Washington Hotel. "An opportunity to appear in a Paris fashion show is the ultimate ambition of every fashion model. And besides, I've never been to Paris and I'm dying to see the city."

Ideal Measurements

A TALL, SVELTE BRUNET, Nancy has been a featured model at Julius Garfinckel & Co., for the past three years. Before that she was a Powers' model in New York, and still earlier did fashion work in Honolulu.

Nancy possesses the ideal measurements for modeling, plus a great amount of chic. She stands 5 feet, 9½ inches (in heels), weighs 120 pounds. Her waist measures 22 inches and she wears a size 7½ B shoe.

A native Washingtonian, she is the daughter of Mrs. William K. Hartung, and the late Mr. Hartung, local real estate operator. Her husband is Lieutenant Colonel Thompson, USAAF, West Point graduate. They have two youngsters, Peter and a daughter, Brooke.

Colonel Thompson was recently transferred to Carlisle Barracks in Pennsylvania, and his family has moved to quarters there. But Nancy, devoted to her career as a model, returns to Washington for special fashion shows.

Her first aim in Paris? To buy clothes, of course!

Clothes for Every Type

THERE will be a dress for every size-type in today's two fashion showings at Woodward & Lothrop's. Little girls, big girls, and the average-size miss will all find something cut to their size.

Hours for the shows are 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., and they will take place on the store's third floor salon. Featured will be the new spring collection of Martini Designed fashions. There will be the famous "Diminutives," created especially for the woman who is 5 feet 5 inches and under; a regular size collection of high fashioned dresses, formals and fireside clothes; and some "Tall Girl Clothes," which Designer Sylvan Rich has made for the woman who measures up to 6 feet when wearing high heels.

While several dress houses have been offering under-regulation-size dresses in past seasons, this is the first time that Washington has presented a collection for the above-regulation-size girl. Mr. Rich had not designed a large number of these clothes, but the few he has done are noteworthy. They are planned to make the tall woman proud of her height, confident of her figure and not afraid that her hemline, waistline or wristline will look as though it had shrunk several inches in the last washing.

Grooming for Teen-Agers

IT'S never too soon to learn the art of "Good Grooming." That, at any rate, is how members of Girl Scout Troop No. 201 look at the matter.

Yesterday, a group of these youngsters, ranging in age from 12 to 14, trooped over to a beauty shop to hear a lecture on "Teen-Age Grooming of Hair and Skin." All were out to earn a merit badge for "Good Grooming." Dressed in their spic and span uniforms, they listened intently to the series of illustrated talks given by experts of the William of New York Hairstylists shop at the Michigan-Eastern Avenues Shopping Center.

Valentine Day Fashion Show To Benefit Heart Association

The day of hearts, February 14, has been chosen for a luncheon-fashion show to benefit the Washington Heart Association. Plans for the Valentine's Day event were completed at a tea given yesterday at the home of Mrs. Daniel LeRay Borden, who is a member of the committee in charge of the luncheon.

The fund-raising project is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert E. Moran, and is being sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the District of Columbia Medical Society, which has distributed gifts to bedridden children on an informal basis for more than a dozen years.

The luncheon—which will be highlighted by a fashion show of Maurice Rentner styles presented through the cooperation of Julius Garfinckel & Co.—will be held in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel at 1 p. m. on Valentine's Day.

Special guest at yesterday's tea was Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who is chairman of the women's division for the Heart Association's fund drive which will run from February 7 to February 28.

Other guests at the tea were Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army; Mrs. George C. Ruhland and Mrs. Leonard A. Scheele.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Couple Eloped 25 Years Ago to Outwit Bride's Dragon-Mother; They've Been Happy, But Mom Is Still a Problem in the Bosom of the Family

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Twenty-five years ago, in the month of March, my parents were married secretly, to circumvent my maternal grandmother's opposition to the match. Mother was 24, and dad 28, at the time.

Grandmother has never liked dad. She contends he wasn't good enough for mother. She forbade them to marry and in fact ordered dad off the premises, and her antagonism has never changed, although she has lived with my parents for the last few years, after her husband died and her own sons and other relatives failed to offer her a home.

These other relatives argued that they couldn't get along with her, whereupon my dad asked her to live with him and mother, where she is very comfortably situated and relieved of all worries. But we all know she still dislikes dad.

Would She Spoil Silver Jubilee?

NOW for the problem: My brother and I are married and have homes of our own, but we have never forgotten the wonderfully kind upbringing our parents gave us, and we would like to honor them with a reception for their many friends in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

However, our parents don't want the reception, for the reason (they say) that grandmother will feel obliged to felicitate them, and all of us, including her, will be uncomfortably aware that underneath she still dislikes dad. Nevertheless my brother and I feel that dad and mother deserve to be honored on this occasion of which we are proud.

Will you advise us, therefore, whether to disregard grandmother's feelings and hold the reception, or let it slide to keep peace with her?—which to me seems wrong. We don't want to seem inconsiderate of grandmother, but to Tom and me there never can be two finer parents than our own. What is the right thing to do?

B. G.

Story Reminds Us of Reader's 'Tip'

DEAR B. G.: I had a Christmas letter from a shut-in reader, 85 years old, who lives in Oregon. She writes cheerfully that she has no problems, is blessed with good eyesight and enjoys this feature.

She had 41 years' happiness with her first husband before being widowed; and is now rounding out 21 years' happiness with her second spouse,—"the happiness that all Christian couples should have," she says.

Then she adds, "The only rule for a happy life I know is for each to think of the other's comfort or pleasure before his own."

Your parents' generous, self effacing, unified consideration of the grandmother's feelings suggests that the above rule has been the guiding principle in their married life, too, with such fine results—according to your testimony—that their grown children have abundant cause to love, honor and praise them.

Thus the rule seems worth stressing, for the benefit of any young couples who may be seeking a "proved" success principle to guide them in marriage; so I am glad of opportunity to mention it here. And now let's talk about the reception.

Festivity Might Soften Grandma

IN MY OPINION, the grandmother's grudge-bearing attitude—which doesn't make sense in the light of family history—shouldn't be allowed to block a festive filial celebration of your parents' silver wedding anniversary. If she is put on the spot to felicitate your parents, and feels like a fool in doing so, I'd call that divine retribution for her mulish ill grace, indefensibly maintained with conspicuous injustice of recent years.

However, the truth is that a "mom"-mother, when Granny's age, with her husband dead and much of the best of her life behind, usually gets an emotional lift out of a big family party in which she may figure importantly. So go ahead with your plans; put Granny on notice that she's to lend a hand in co-hosting the job, dressed to the teeth and wearing flowers; and persist in that theme even if she is balky or sniffy during preliminaries.

Come the day, she'll be there with bells on, likely; and by the time the party is over, she may be permanently softened towards your dad.

Briton Who Needs New Teeth or a Wig Is in Luck Under Nation's Health Plan

When Great Britain's Health Plan was put into effect about six months ago, just about everybody rushed out to get a new set of teeth of a new pair of spectacles. And the wig wearers are in luck, too, for the government not only furnishes them with new wigs but cleans them free of charge four times yearly. So revealed Gordon Huson, Second Secretary of the British Embassy in charge of economic information, in a talk yesterday before the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women.

Speaking on "Britain's Post War Experiment of Nationalization," Huson declared that a country must have economic stability before it can be assured of maintaining political liberties. "What we are doing in Great Britain to stabilize the economy is no more than the President in his Inaugural speech has offered to do in the United States," he asserted.

Huson said that only 5 per cent of Britain's industry has been nationalized and that the object was to equalize flow of investment and consumer spending.

"American may come to look on Britain as a solid economic rock when the dust bowl blows in another depression," he concluded.

Measure Up to a More Beautiful Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

WHIP OUT THE tape measure, borrow Junior's crayons, and play the game of finding better measurements.

The waist being unquestionably the line of least resistance to adipose tissue, start there. To find the waist, place hands on hips, wash-lady fashion, with thumb and forefinger encircling the waist. That's the place to measure. Slip the tape around, and bring it together in front. Stand in your usual posture, and no fair pulling the tape too tight . . . let it out a half-inch . . . that's better. Mark the line on the tape with red crayon and a W.

To see what part settled posture plays, try this test. Pin the tape at the waist. Now to slim the measure, pull up, lifting waist out of hips and ribs out of waist. Center all the up-pull through the midriff. Keep shoulders down and easy. Can you take up close to an inch in the tape? Then posture improvement can slim your waist. You should leave the red mark at the original waist measure . . . but not for long.

Now slip the tape measure down a little below the waistline and this time bring the tape together across the abdomen . . . the part that contributes to the general spread. If you think of it as your stomach, mark the tape with an S in red.

Next, hips incorporated, which takes in the part anatomically termed the buttocks. Be sure to measure around the largest area—it's all hips. One overly eager reducer reports she broke the tape trying to "slim" the hips.

Another pivotal measurement is the bust. To take this, circle the tape around your back and bring it together across the center of the breasts. If this measurement tends to sag, take it over an uplift bra.

Mark all original measurements on the tape in red, with a letter beside it telling which measurement it represents.

It's symmetry that makes for a beautiful figure. Weight, of course, figures in, for too many pounds can throw all the measurements on the buxom side, and too few pounds do not add up to lovely curves.

Tomorrow we'll figure proportionate differences and find where your measurements are out of kilter.

Tells of FBI's International Activities

The reciprocal arrangements which our Federal Bureau of Investigation has with 73 other countries, was explained yesterday by John J. McGuire of the FBI at a luncheon meeting of the Twentieth Century Club's International Outlook section.

Mr. McGuire gave as examples of this international cooperation, the cases of attempted sabotage during the war about which this country received tips from other countries in time to avert disaster, kidnapping cases and other types of crime with which the Federal agency deals.

Mr. McGuire also spoke about the concern felt by J. Edgar Hoover and other members of his organization over the increase in juvenile delinquency which now tends toward crimes against persons rather than crimes against property.

The current problem of souvenir weapons brought home by servicemen, which have been turned into weapons of crime, was also discussed by the speaker.

Ohio Girls Hear Dr. Van Straten

After the Waves proved they could do the jobs assigned them efficiently, the United States Navy helped push through a congressional bill to make them a permanent part of the service, Dr. Florence Van Straten, aerological engineer, U. S. Navy Department, told members of the Ohio Girls Club in a dinner address last night at the Fairfax Hotel.

She pointed out that many women now are on active and reserve duty with the Navy. For example, she said that the Volunteer Organized Reserve in the District is one of the many divisions attending weekly drills to maintain their Navy skills.

Home-Decorated Curtains

If you like to have things in the house that are peculiarly your own, the curtains in the child's room offer a good outlet for your creative efforts.

Even though there's little of the artist in you, there are some simple ways of decorating curtains that you and the children will find pleasing. The first step is to keep things simple. When our youngsters were very young, I laboriously designed linoleum cuts of a decorated cup and a multi-colored ball both of which they enjoyed. Printing a border of these on white curtains and alternating the ball and cup made an attractive pair of curtains, which the youngsters liked especially because Daddy had made them.

Figures cut from colored cloth and appliqued to the curtains also will give effects far better than your talent would seem to deserve. A gingham dog and a calico cat, for instance, will delight the children. And houses from figured cloth will look like the candy and gingerbread house of Hansel-and-Gretel fame.

Making Meringue

How do I make a meringue out of meringue powder such as bakers use? I understand I have to boil it? M. E. S.

According to directions given me by a baker you do not have to boil the meringue. He tells me that the powder is put into a bowl, cold water added and the mixture is beaten. He uses 1 quart of water to 4 ounces of the powder. Continue to beat until fluffy and then add sugar, a little salt and vanilla, if desired, for flavor.

Before the war, I bought Virginia House bedroom furniture in cherry. I would like to have more of it. I've written to where their factory was before the war, but received no reply. None of the stores that once handled the Virginia House furniture have any suggestions. Can you give a helping hand on this problem? A. A. R.

There is a furniture store on 7th Street which can order Virginia House furniture for you. You can call this firm at NAtional 0677.

I have some brass which has been finished with a coat of lacquer. As it needs cleaning, due to contact with body acids, etc., from handling, I am wondering if you could tell me what will take off the lacquer coat quickly so it may be polished. There is quite a lot of it and I'm looking for the most expedient method. E.R.B.

The lacquer can be taken off by using either very hot water or denatured alcohol. When it has been removed, polish with a good metal polish.

Can you tell me how to go about cleaning a pine paneled recreation room? Do you wash the walls with soap and water and use a varnish afterward? B. F.

Yes, you could wash the walls, using mild soap and not too much water. Wash only a small area at one time, rinse and buff dry immediately. When thoroughly dry you could varnish it or give it several well-rubbed coats of wax.

If the finish now on the walls is wax you can easily remove the wax, with the dirt which has become imbedded in it, by wiping the surface with a cleaning and polishing wax. This comes in liquid form and is easy to apply. When the dirt has been removed with the wax, apply a fresh coat of wax with a clean cloth, let dry and polish.

Can you send me, or advise me where to get, a picture or drawing and a description as to taste and smell of all the popular spices and seasonings like rosemary, marjoram, thyme, cloves, etc., so I can familiarize myself with them and also in what foods they should be used. I've been ignorant of those things for years and I love to try new things. M. C.

You can get a guide to the use of herbs on cardboard for hanging in your kitchen which includes a picture of each and suggestions as to their use by writing to The Family Circle Magazine, 25 West 45th st., New York 19, N. Y. The cost of the guide is 20 cents. Also, many modern cook books have suggestions for the use of both herbs and spices in cooking.

We are building bookcases along one side of a room underneath the windows. In the center we have a radiator to hide. We thought of using metal cane in the front of the radiator and the top the same as the bookcases. It all would be painted white the same as the woodwork in the room. From what I've written, do you think it will make a nice appearance, and where can we purchase metal cane? C. J. G.

I think your plan for bookcases and inclosed radiator should result in very attractive ones. Metal cane seems hard to get, but I have found a company which sells an open metal panel with a mosaic-type design which can be used the same way as you plan to use the cane. The firm can be reached by calling District 4505.

Can you tell me how "evergreens," for instance, holly wreaths are treated so as to preserve their original green color? Also, how do florists force poinsettas to bloom at a certain date? P. S.

I'm sorry we do not answer plant questions in this column.

Will you tell me how I can remove grease stains, apparently caused by baby oil, on pale blue wallpaper. E. M. M.

Make a paste by mixing cornstarch with carbon tetrachloride. Spread the paste one quarter inch thick over the stains and let stand until dry. Brush away. If all the stain is not removed with the first treatment, repeat. Another method is to heat Fuller's earth in an old tin jar top or a pie tin and apply it to the spots. When thoroughly cool, brush off with whiskbroom.

Nat. Capital Bank Reports Record Gross

By S. Oliver Goodman

Gross operating earnings of National Capital Bank reached a new high of $378,182 last year, a gain of 11.8 per cent over the previous year.

President George A. Didden, jr., in his annual report to stockholders, pointed out that operating expenses also set a new peak of $246,871, an increase of 16.8 per cent.

Net operating income, before provision for income taxes and bad debt reserves, amounted to $128,088, an upturn of 7.4 per cent. Income taxes and bad debt reserves, net was equal to $1.83 a share.

Loans of $5,505,952 advanced 8.5 per cent during the year, while investment in Government securities totaled $3,343,769 at year-end for a drop of 7.6 per cent.

Commenting on the outlook, Didden stated: "Many signs point to a change in our economy, dominated by deflationary forces. It is my belief that those in political power fear deflation far more than inflation and that they possess sufficient control over our economy to postpone the inevitable readjustment for sometime.

"Under these circumstances the natural forces of deflation may be balanced by artificial means to produce a good level of business . . . Bank earnings should remain fairly constant if a conservative loan policy is adopted to prevent losses caused by oversupply of certain commodities . . ."

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Harold W. H. Burrows has been elected a vice president and named to the directorate of Parks, Davis & Co. He was a colonel with the Army Service Forces headquarters staff in Washington from 1942 to 1946, was controller in 1946 for the UNRRA Chinese Mission in Shanghai, and later was controller for the RFC in Washington . . . William H. Burchfield, board chairman, and William H. Friesell, vice president and treasurer, will retire February 1 from the Joseph Horne Co., Pittsburgh department store. . . . Dr. Arno Johnson, vice president in charge of research for the J. Walter Thompson Co., will address a group of trade association executives at a luncheon Thursday in the Mayflower . . . Philip W. Jones, former hotel chain executive, has been named general manager of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

INSURANCE SALES: Washington sales of ordinary life insurance aggregated $128,899,000 in 1948, a dip of 4 per cent as compared with the previous year. December sales here totaled $11,272,000, a plunge of 23 per cent as compared with the same 1947 month.

PROGRESS: A 2½-million-dollar gain in loans and a million gain in savings share investments highlighted the year for Northwestern Federal Savings & Loan Association, shareholders were told at the annual meeting. Secretary Richmond H. Gibson also said that assets at yearend topped 9½ million for the first time in the association's history. Howard S. Gott was reelected president, R. L. Houston Jones executive vice president and all other officers and directors were renamed.

STOCK ISSUES: Public sales of common and preferred stocks in 1948 dropped well below the 1947 total, the Investment Dealers Digest said yesterday. The Digest's annual survey of corporate financing discloses that $381,562,366 worth of preferred stocks were sold, compared with $740,303,091 in 1947. Common stock sales dropped to $497,427,937 from $585,690,410. Bond sales increased to $2,832,451,900 from $2,580,493,600. The grand total amounted to $3,711,442,203, against $3,906,487,100 in 1947.

ODD LOTS: The Federal Reserve Board's antitrust hearing on Transamerica Corp., scheduled for January 27, probably will be postponed for about a week because the company's chief counsel has suffered a sprained back . . . Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley has ruled against a proposed merger of the bankrupt Florida East Coast Railroad with the Atlantic Coast Line and returned the merger plan to the ICC . . . Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, N. C., has registered with the SEC a proposed sale at competitive bidding of 40 million dollars worth of first and refunding mortgage bonds . . . Harriman Ripley & Co. and associates submitted the best bid for 12 million dollars of first mortgage 3-year bonds of Public Service Co. of Indiana. The bid was 100.4049 for a 3 per cent coupon and offering is expected at 100.99 to yield 2.95 per cent . . . Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. in 1948 passed the billion-dollar mark in life insurance in force.

In Memoriam

BRADFORD (BONNIE) FRANCES E. A tribute of love and devotion to the beautiful life she gave us is the cherished and everlasting memory of our devoted wife and mother, FRANCES EUGENE BRADFORD, who left us 10 years ago today, January 25, 1939.

$950 DOWN, THINK! ! !

Do you feel secure accumulating receipts renting the house or apt. you have or if 1¼ of what you paid in 1940? Where your income is now 1¾ of what it was in 1940, and the replacement cost of your housing is 1 9/10 of 1940. If so, doesn't it appear to be contrary to all economics? Why? What's the Verdict?

THE DAZED DRUNK

Q. A cheerful young farmer went to town one Saturday afternoon and joined some pals. He drank heavily and convivially all afternoon. Driving through town, he had several minor accidents, fatally injured a pedestrian and kept on going. He was captured after wrecking his car. Charged with murder, he asked the court to instruct the jury that if he did not know what he was doing, he could not be guilty of murder. Should the court so instruct the jury?

A. Murder is an unlawful killing with malice aforethought. Malice aforethought doesn't necessarily mean an active design to kill; it includes acts done regardless of duty to others, "an act done with a depraved mind and attended with circumstances which ind

THE DISTRICT LINE

by Bill Gold

Mississippi State Grads Can Kick This One Around a Bit

Al Morland of 3374 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., thinks it's a shame the way grid mentors get kicked around. Al cites this recent line from his favorite newspaper:

"After serving as freshman coach at Georgetown, he resigned to become the football and coach at Mississippi State."

PERSONAL NOTES

J. Harry Phillips, jr., 2222 I st. nw.: The cartoons are extremely well done, and clever. I wanted to print them, but find that I can't, because they were colored, and the reds and browns will reproduce black.

Mrs. Walter J. Hamer, 2720 Wisconsin ave.: No, no, not THAT! Let me forward your letter to our circulation department first, and see if we can't arrange to deliver your paper earlier.

COLD LEGAL APPRAISAL

Pete Dickerson, former local newscaster and CAB investigator, is currently driving out to the West Coast, where he'll practice law. From Springfield, Mo., he writes:

"Just about everything possible has happened on this trip. The car was weary when I started; now it's practically rebuilt.

"The weather is just plain impossible, and tonight's forecast says I'll run into a blizzard tomorrow.

"This makes me very happy, since I have now come to consider such things as normal, and draw a sense of security from the regularity of their occurrence.

"I go to sleep tonight in complete confidence that tomorrow I'll get stuck in a snow drift, have the rear-end of the car replaced, lock myself out of the car and lose my spare keys, contract typhoid from the water at these tourist cabins, and never again get an opportunity to complain about Washington weather.

"Oh, well—as we lawyers say: 'Where there's a will, there's confusion.'"

MISCELLANY

David William Rouleau of 510 Park plaza, Charlottesville, Va., is writing to the White House, to urge "Good Ole Harry & Daughter" to accept Drew Pearson's suggestion that they team up to make a phonograph record for the benefit of the March of Dimes . . . Col. Breckinridge A. Day of 2801 31st st. nw. wrinkles a brow over our afternoon contemporary's account of the money which was found when the Pennsylvania ave. loading platforms were taken up for the big parade. The story said that one workman had acquired "$1.71 in nickels, dimes and quarters," and Colonel Day doesn't think it can be done . . . Our morning contemporary has Lee Baker of 402 4th st. ne. confused. Lee notes the classified ad: "Room, Unfurnished—Plymouth, 4-dr., heater, good appearance, very dependable, $295" . . . Wonder if it's a one- or two-bedroom Plymouth? . . . Mrs. Robert Kendrick, jr., of 1600 18th st. se. has received a letter containing a $10 bill and a note signed "From one who has reason to remember a good deed." Mrs. Kendrick can't imagine who might have sent the money, or why—but she says "thanks" anyhow . . . Alan B. Crammatte of 1103 Trenton pl. se. is a sly one. He writes: "I see The Washington Post is already campaigning for Truman in '52. The banner on the front of your building on Inauguration Day expressed the wish that HST would lead every parade for the next four years. Wouldn't that include the next inaugural parade?"

YANKS SEE RED

The Russians have broken so many vows
They've completely lost their "reps;"
If our Yankee fury they should arouse,
They had better watch their steppes.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I've been a singer for many years, and have appeared around town a good many times. Now that I've reach the "advanced" age of 30, and had my third child, I'm really in my prime and sing far better than I did in my single days.

My beef is this: Bill Herson announced on his program that he was looking for a girl singer. I applied for the job; but when I told him my age and that I had three children, his enthusiasm dropped like a ton of lead.

Dinah Shore is past 30 and has children; Betty Grable is past 30 and also has a family. Why can't I, too, continue my career? Is it because I haven't been divorced a couple of times, or because I should have lied a little in applying for the job?

Professionally, I'm Kay Howard. Privately, I'm:

Mrs. L. Eisler,
3508 Longfellow st.
Hyattsville, Md.

Dear Kay:

Probably the best way to get the job is to drop a hint that CBS is after you.

And even if that doesn't work, don't fret about it. If I could write like you sing, I'd have Lippmann's job. Bill

GOOD QUESTION

Everett Lane of Comorn, Va., wants to know why Lucky Strike doesn't sponsor Art (WOL) Brown; he's "so round, so firm, so fully packed."

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—The advance men report a tragic decline in road receipts, and many touring companies are folding. There was a time when most shows made their money from the road tours, and stayed in New York only long enough to be able to advertise that the hinterlanders would be seeing a real Broadway show . . . George M. Cohan got his training and first fortune touring in shows all over the country. Lou Holtz once told Cohan: "The town I come from is so small, you never even heard of it." Cohan insisted: "I must have played there," and Holtz said, "No, it was too small" . . . "Did it have an op'ry house?" asked Cohan. "It did? Then I ployed there."

Ambassador Van Kleffens of the Netherlands said in New York last week, with a straight face, that his country will sponsor Indonesia's admission into the U. N. . . . Look magazine's story on Cissie Patterson will be illustrated with pictures from the private collection of Jackie Martin, who got her first camera assignment from Cissie. The publisher allowed Miss Martin to photograph all her private parties . . . Bishop William T. Manning, one of the sponsors of the NYU-Bellevue Medical Center Project at Washington Square, thereby is sponsoring his own eviction. For the bishop lives in one of the buildings which would have to come down to make room for the project.

Salvador Dali dined at the Colony restaurant Friday night, and saw Michael Arlen there. He greeted the novelist, and then whispered to his companion: "There really are two Michael Arlens. One is always at the 21 Club. Whenever I go there, I see him. The other Arlen is the one who is here now. I'll bet," said Dali, "that if we were to phone the 21 Club right now, and ask 'Is Michael Arlen there?' the answer would be 'yes.'"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Farley, Ignored, Laughs Last

By Drew Pearson

One of the semi-comic, semi-tragic sights of Inauguration was big Jim Farley, resplendent in shiny top hat, cutaway coat, with boutonniere and cane, looking for a seat at Truman's swearing-in ceremony.

PEARSON

Big Jim, who once ruled FDR's political roost, hadn't been given a seat with the top dignitaries. The Cabinet, the Senators, the Representatives sat near the President. Other bigwigs had favored seats. But Jim Farley, his top hat towering above everyone else, had to make shift among the press and lesser-lights. He looked as ill-at-ease as the naval aide to the Governor of the Virgin Islands.

Later that afternoon, 3000 people plus milled around in the Mellon Art Gallery waiting to shake hands with President Truman. They had received engraved invitations to this, the most exclusive of all receptions, and they had come from Omaha and Kalamazoo, Keokuk and Olathe, to greet the President of the United States.

The White House had especially asked that the little people who worked for Truman—not the big socialites—be invited. Some had rented gray-striped pants and swallow-tails. Some wore tuxedos, some wore white ties and evening clothes. But they were all primed for this, the most important of all receptions.

Meanwhile, Truman was still sitting on Pennsylvania ave., watching long lines of artillery and troops, the naval cadets and armored cavalry which had done nothing to elect him and which could have been reviewed on any other day. The brass hats had put their military units near the head and middle of the parade, leaving the labor unions, the war veterans, the Negro units and civilian groups, who swung the balance to elect Truman, bringing up the rear. So Truman stayed to the end.

Truman Arrives

Finally, however, he arrived at the Mellon Gallery reception. The waiting guests perked up, preened their clothes, prepared to greet the President.

"I don't want him to shake this clammy hand," said one man, wiping the moisture from his hand with a fresh-laundered handkerchief.

"The folks back home bet me I wouldn't shake hands with Truman, but now I can tell 'em this invitation meant what it said," opined another.

Hastily, the President shook hands with foreign diplomats, waiting in a side room. Then he greeted the Cabinet in another room. Then he came out into the great rotunda of the gallery and surveyed the 3000 or more people waiting to see him. Obviously it was hopeless. So lifting his voice, the President announced:

"I am very glad to see you all, and I thank you for coming. I wish I could shake hands with all of you, but you can see that it's impossible. So I'm going to shake hands with the Vice Preesident, and our ladies will shake hands. Then you can all go home and say that you've shaken hands with the President of the United States."

Whereupon Mr. Truman and Mr. Barkley held their hands aloft in a clasp that all could see, while Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Truitt, the Vice President's daughter, shook hands. Then they departed.

The crowd looked after them. Obviously they could not tell the folks at home they had shaken hands with the President for the simple reason that the press and radio would tell the true story even before they got there. Mr. Truman, they thought, should have realized this.

However, over there was Big Jim Farley, looking distinguished and handsome in his tall topper and neat-fitting cutaway. So the 3000 disappointed guests formed in a long line and they all shook hands with Jim.

Note—He who laughs last laughs best.

Thomas Draws Pay

Ex-Speaker Joe Martin didn't advertise it, but he had difficulty getting other Republican Congressmen to serve on the new Un-American Activities Committee as long as ex-Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey remained a member.

Conscientious Congressman Pat Kearney of New York, when offered a Republican place on the committee by Martin, turned it down. He said he wouldn't serve as long as Thomas, under indictment for conspiracy to defraud the Government, remained a committee member.

This reveals what has been generally overlooked in the hubbub of opening Congress, that Parnell Thomas, claiming to be too sick to stand trial, is not too sick to continue as a member of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Thus he can continue to draw pay, perhaps indefinitely, from the same Government he is under indictment for defrauding. Also he can continue getting the best medical attention in the world at Walter Reed Hospital virtually free.

Free Alaskan Border

There is one spot on the globe where the Iron Curtain doesn't come between Russian and American citizens. They not only intermingle but intermarry across the border without bothering about either politics or passports.

Ironically this rare relationship is found along the only border where the U. S. and the U. S. S. R. actually touch—among the Eskimos of Alaska and Siberia. On one side, the inhabitants of Big Diomede Island are Soviet citizens. Three miles to the east, their neighbors on Little Diomede Island are American citizens.

All of them Eskimos, their nationality depends upon which side of the border their parents happened to be camped when they were born. It isn't unusual for brothers and sisters to be citizens of opposite countries. In fact, during the war, the draft reached into Little Diomede Island and took a Russian citizen by mistake.
